Johnson's Inauguration Day a Melange Of Solemnity and Fractured Security; President Proves to be a "Man of Iron"

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's inauguration day turned out to be a remarkable melange of solemnity, folksiness and fractured security.

The security was broken by the President himself. The inaugural parade had hardly begun when the ebullient President jumped out of his bullet-proof limousine. In long strides he proceeded to the band of his alma mater, Southwest Texas State College, and shook the hands of four girl banner bearers.

The important part was, of course, the swearing in and the inaugural address. And the reaction to this speech, in which Johnson branded poverty and ignorance as national enemies, and said such evils as racial injustice and international hatreds must go, was generally favorable.

Many Republicans joined Democrats in applauding the goals, if not perhaps all the methods. Example: Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, who was deposed by colleagues as House Republican leader, called the speech "excellent." He added that of course there could be differences about specific programs.

The 56-year-old President, in his great happiness, proved to be an iron man physically. He wound up the long day with an arduous round of hall-hopping.

Accompanied by the First Lady in her jonquil yellow satin dress, he attended the inaugural ball, spread out over five great halls. Some 26,000 people had paid $25 a ticket for these king-sized "dances." The decor, symbolizing "America the Beautiful," featured shining seas, waves of amber grain and spacious skies.

The Johnsons' first stop on the ball circuit was at the Mayflower Hotel. The President led the First Lady to the dance floor, and danced with her briefly before changing partners nine times. Then he spotted Mrs. Clifton Daniel, daughter of former President Harry S Truman. He lifted her over the rail of her box and made several turns around the dance floor with her while several hundred guests applauded.

During the afternoon, the President had the time of his life watching the big inaugural parade pass his reviewing stand in front of the White House.

When he got to the White House, attendants brought the beagle "Him" and the white collie "Blanco" to him and the President lifted Him up into the leather easy chair reserved for the chief executive in the reviewing stand.

The dog stayed only briefly, perhaps because Lady Bird foresaw trouble. She is reported to have hinted strongly that Blanco is an outdoors dog, used to romping, and if he started romping in the reviewing stand things could get embarrassing.

When the Georgia float rolled by, the President kept pointing, calling Lady Bird's attention, as if to say, "Look, ma."

The float was a model of a Civil War railroad train, and represented the Lady Bird special which chugged through the South in the last campaign.

The President kept giving the high sign of friendship to all and sundry paraders, including Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, who has given the national Democratic administrations a peck of trouble.

The President was particularly joyous over the band from the Chicago Fire Department. These experts play music scored for sirens, bells and the hissing of fire extinguishers. They are led by a St. Bernard dog with a hat on.

Probably the most tired marchers Wednesday night were the "Barbarettes" of Santa Barbara, Calif. These ladies high-kicked their way all down Pennsylvania Avenue, in a striking display of comeliness.

Least tired? Probably the "highty-tighty" band of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. A march of a couple of miles is a breeze to them. They once got caught up in a five-mile parade in the Deep South, and by the end they had played "Dixie" 72 times.

Wonder of wonders, the parade attained its goal — to end before sundown, which was at 5:16 p.m. Actually the procession got past the President at 5:07.

The President then seized a microphone and said: "Thank you very much. You are wonderful people and you have made this such a lovely day, and we will try so hard to be worthy of your trust and friendship."

The 7,242-ton ship is owned by the Seres Steamship Co.

Administrators Of Schools Will Meet at Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- A conference on "The Administrator's Role in Improving Instruction" will be held Thursday, February 4, at Southeast Missouri State College.

The program will be aimed primarily at superintendents, directors of instruction, secondary principals, supervisors, elementary principals, and counselors.

Featured speaker will be Dr. Newman Walker, Superintendent of the Paducah, Ky., Schools.

Reservations must be made by January 29 with Dr. Jack Vincent, Professor of Education at Southeast Missouri State.

To Organize Adult Classes Next Monday

An organizational meeting for Adult Education Night Classes will be held in the cafeteria of Sikeston Senior High School, Monday, January 25, 7:30 p.m. Classes will begin as soon as possible after the meeting.

Courses which may be offered include the following: typing, rapid writing, shorthand dictation, bookkeeping, office machines, intermediate sewing, tailoring, interior decorating, Spanish, French, phonics, and slimnastics (women's physical conditioning). Other courses may be offered if a sufficient number will enroll.

A minimum of 12 enrollees is required for offering any of these courses.

Most of these classes will meet for two or three hours one night each week for a period of eight or twelve weeks--a total of twenty-four class hours of instruction. Classes which meet more or less than 24 hours will be prorated in according with the above rate.

For further information call Sikeston High School, GR 1-5440.

FORT WORTH, Tex. AP -- The F111, a combat plane being built for the Air Force and the Navy, made its fourth test hop Wednesday. General Dynamics, the builder, called the 35-minute flight a success.

Gibson In Talk To Lions

Representing the Junior Woman's Club, Mrs. Shirley Dyer and Mrs. Sarah Sadler, were present, and Mrs. Dyer outlined the plans for the Follies to be staged by their organization.

Mr. Gibson outlined his address through a chart, showing how present national legislation would effect business, industry and other forms of national economy. He compared his topic with a live frog, when placed in a pan of hot water, will jump out, but when placed in a pan of cool water that is being heated will lose its sense of escape until it has been boiled.

"Your present Congress will have a liberal voting record in the two houses of the present 89th congress compared to the past congresses as follows: In the Senate the number is 59 compared to 56, while in the House it will be 267 compared 224. The coalition leadership of South and North members has been reduced from the 75 to 80 members, to the present 50."

"Just how it will affect you personally is the proposal of $2 minimum wage, a 35-hour work week, and double time for overtime. Other legislation being proposed is the federal regulation of unemployment compensation, a health and safety bill, extend the Davis-Bacon Act, and the Walsh-Healey Act. Included in the agenda will be the expansion of TVA concept of more public power; more control of the railroads, and an increase in public housing."

"New legislation also calls for the expansion of present agencies, some of whom are the public employment service, power commission, and the Area Redevelopment Act. Fiscal issues will be on the 1965 budget, the excise tax reform, social security medicare and unemployment compensation."

On the control issues will be a bill on consumer credit, packaging and labeling, and the omnibus bill. On the labor issues for this congress will be the minimum wage, 35-hour week, right to work law repeal, and the employment service extension. Interwoven with these bills will be the apportionment bill and the depressed areas bill."

"Your cost for the first year of legislation calls for an outlay, if passed by Congress, as follows; Medicare $1.6 billion; Accelerated Public Works. $1.5 billion; Urban Redevelopment $750 million; Appalachian Regional Development $228 million; Federal U. C., $188 million, and the Area Redevelopment Act $355 million."

The effect of the 35-hour week on business and industry would raise the present labor costs from 14.3 per cent to a high of 28.6 per cent. The question is just how much of this cost can be passed on to the consumer?"

"There is the defeatist attitude that can be taken by the people due to the lopsided majority in Congress, as well as the lack of business experience by many members of congress, as well as a number of Republicans who have deflected."

"In answer to any defeatist attitude are seven reasons that Congress may not be able to pass a great part of this program are as follows: President Johnson is for many of the things that business and industry is for. The President stated that the election was not a mandate of all the people and would not allow him to go on a spending spree. The extremism issue did not repudiate the conservative members of congress. The widespread support of business for the President. Many members of the committee are still headed by conservatives, and a similar period as today existed several times over in past administrations.

"My only appeal is that today every person should attend the political meetings, to see what is going on and how it will affect them."

NEW YORK (AP) -- Carol Channing, star of "Hello, Dolly!" since the Broadway musical opened, has agreed to extend her contract until June 1, 1967.

Hornersville Man Dies Of Injuries In Auto Accident

There was only one traffic accident reported by Troop E, State Highway Patrol for Wednesday with neither fatality or injury involved

However at 2:45 a.m. Wednesday, the Patrol reports, Leonard Evans, 30, of Hornersville, died in the Dunklin County Memorial Hospital from injuries received in a traffic accident last Monday.

According to the Patrol, at 11:50 a.m. Monday, a mile south of Kennett on Highway 25, Mr. Evans' car ran into the rear of a Bread truck driven by Robert Marshall, 35, of Sikeston.

Early End to Dock Strike Up to Strikers

NEW YORK (AP) — A possible early end to the crippling Maine-to-Texas dock strike was in the hands of striking New York longshoremen today, as they voted a second time on a contract they rejected two weeks ago.

Thomas W. Gleason, president of the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association, says he has received enough petitions and telephone calls to assure acceptance of the proposed contract with the New York Shipping Association.

But even if his prediction proves correct, contract disputes in other ports could prolong the 11-day walkout that has idled 343 ships on the East Coast.

Some 60,000 men are idle and estimates of the cost to the national economy range from $20 million to $67 million a day.

However, an Associated Press survey indicated that the strike's full impact has not been felt in some areas.

Boston reported losing $500,000 weekly. Officials commented that many industries apparently were unaffected since they had not used up inventories of raw materials since the walkout began.

New York's loss is figured at $1.2 million a day.

The Gulf Coast walkout has more than quadrupled the import of bananas at Tampa, Fla., where dock workers are unaffected since they are under a separate contract. Most of the fruit was diverted from New Orleans.

ONE EMERGENCY

Only one person was treated and dismissed from the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital Wednesday. Jack King of Abberville, Miss., mashed finger.

WASHINGTON AP -- It was a quiet day at the first aid tent set up on the Capitol grounds for the inauguration.

Winston Losing Ground

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill has become weaker still, steadily losing ground to the effects of the stroke he suffered last Friday.

A new deterioration in the 90-year-old statesman's circulation was reported Wednesday night by his physician, Lord Moran, who said in the 13th bulletin he had issued on Churchill's condition:

"The weakness of Sir Winston's circulation is more marked. There is nothing else to report."

Interpreting the physician's announcement, a medical consultant said: "This indicates that what have been days of waiting may now be shortened to hours. The report of weakened circulation reveals that blood pressure is dropping and general bodily functions must soon fail."

Lord Moran went to Churchill's bedside three times Wednesday, including an unexpected call in the afternoon. Asked Wednesday night if Churchill's life was at a "low ebb," he replied, "Yes."

As newsmen waiting near Churchill's Hyde Park Gate home sought additional information on the former prime minister's condition, Moran added: "His condition is stationary. There is nothing more I can say."

The reference to Sir Winston's circulation was the first since the initial bulletin last Friday, which said he had had a cold, then developed a circulatory weakness following a cerebreal thrombosis.

Churchill has apparently been sleeping or in a coma most of the time since he was stricken. Moran's medical reports have indicated he has felt no pain.

Churchill had been reported restless Tuesday, but at midday Wednesday Moran said the patient had slept peacefully through the night and morning.

Churchill, too ill to be moved to a hospital, lay in his ground-floor back bedroom overlooking a garden behind the brick home at No. 28 Hyde Park Gate.

His family stayed close at hand in London, as they have done since the stroke.

A handful of newsmen kept watch at the entrance to the deadend street.

POTEAU, Okla. AP -- William Sanphard McMurray, who turned 100 years old Wednesday, said he gave up smoking two years ago.

"I quit cigarettes at age 98," he said. "It wasn't the cancer scare that got me. It was the hike in price to 30 cents a package."

Building to Take 3 Years

A huge shopping center fronting 1,165 feet on S. Kingshighway south from Murray Lane, and 1,000 feet on Murray Lane from Kingshighway to Scott street is in prospect for Sikeston it was announced by George Staples, of Charleston, Wednesday. It will be called the "Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center."

Mr. Staples, and his associates, have purchased the tract of land on which the center will be constructed from Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Roth and surveying the property was started by Alex Waters last Thursday.

It is estimated, Mr. Staples said, that when the project is completed it will represent an investment of around three and a half million dollars.

Under plans of the architects, A. F. and Arthur Stauder, of St. Louis, the shopping center will be built in four stages and is expected to be completed in three years.

The first stage involves building stores providing 177,410 square feet -- all of which is already under commitment.

In the second stage the rentable area will be increased to 217,789 square feet; in the third stage, the rentable area will be increased to 267,739 square feet and, in the fourth and final stage the total rentable area under roof will amount to $332,655 square feet.

The location will be on a tract of land fronting on S. Kingshighway from Murray Lane to the Pepsi Cola warehouse and 1,000 feet from Kingshighway to Scott Street on Murray Lane. The west side of the tract extends 1,465 feet south and back of the Pepsi Cola building which takes a 300 foot by 300 foot southeast corner.

The Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center, to quote Mr. Staples, "Will have something of everything for everybody."

Provision is being made in the plans, he said, for a supermarket with 20,130 square feet; a drug store with 5,750 square feet; a junior department store (variety store) with 22,780 square feet; a small department store with 30,065 square feet; a big department store with 72,945 square feet (52,820 square feet on first floor and 20,125 square feet on a second floor); a tire-battery and auto supply store with 6,708 square feet; a number of small shops as yet undetermined as to space and an outside garden area stopped with a fiberglass cover for the display and sale of shrubs, garden equipment etc.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. AP -- Formation of a western Missouri junior college district was approved Tuesday in a special election in 11 school districts in this area.

The final vote was announced today as 11,418 in favor and 5,272 against. The St. Joseph district voted heavily in favor, 10,304 for and 2,060 against. The college would be located here.

Propane Gas Line Explodes near the Osage-3 Injured

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) --A pipeline exploded east of Osage City today and as gas collected in low pockets two cars blew up, injuring three people.

Two were reported seriously burned and were taken to St. Mary's hospital in Jefferson City.

The gas was still burning fiercely at the point of the rupture more than an hour after the initial blast.

The highway patrol blocked off the area and ordered residents to turn out their pilot lights and drivers to turn off their heaters to prevent further blasts.

One farmer said a whole valley was ablaze for a few seconds. There was no wind as the temperature stood in the mid-twenties and the weather bureau did not expect any increase in wind to blow the collected gas away.

CITY POLICE ARREST FOUR ON WEDNESDAY

Scouts To Go To Church Scout Week

Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorers in the Southeast Missouri Council, Boy Scouts of America, will fulfill their obligations to be "faithful in their religious duties" by attending religious services in connection with Boy Scout Week which observes the 55th aniversary of the national boys' organization.

Scouts of Jewish faith will attend Sabbath services on Friday evening (Feb. 5), while other Scouts in uniform will attend their own churches with their parents on Sunday (Feb. 7).

Many churches plan to use the Boy Scout Week theme Strengthen America's Heritage and to recognize their leaders and Scouts as part of services or special programs, according to A. J. Drinkwater, Jr., chairman of the Scout council's camping activities committee.

While not a religious teaching movement, the Boy Scouts of America believes that no boy can grow to a successful manhood without a firm belief in God Drinkwater said.

Semo College Gets Grant For Special Math Program

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- Southeast Missouri State College has been awarded $18,780 by the National Science Foundation for the operation of a science and mathematics enrichment program for high school students this summer.

The six-week program, which will run from June 21 to July 30, will be for a maximum of 60 students who are about to enter their senior year in high school, who are recommended for their interest and ability in science or mathematics.

The program at SEMO State will be aimed at building up work that the students cannot get in their own high schools because of lack of facilities, and is also conceived as a stimulant to general interest in science and mathematics through the students as they return to their high schools for the final year of study.

Participants in the program will live on campus, and eat in college dining halls. The NSF grant covers instructions and fees for laboratory work, but students will be asked to pay their own room and board whenever possible, although financial help will be available where absolutely necessary.

The summer session will consist of four main study areas, from which students will elect one, and at least one supplementary class for all students.

The courses to be offered include Growth and Development (biology), taught by Dr. John Hinni; Atomic and Molecular Chemistry, taught by Dr. E. L. Bahn; The Hydrologic Cycle (earth science), taught by Dr. C. E. Williams; and Modern Algebra, taught by Mr. Harold Hager.

In addition to the major courses, which will be daily lectures and laboratory work, a supplementary course in Probability and Statistics will be held three times a week.

Dr. Robert Kuster, director of the program, said that plans will be completed late this month, and that information will be sent to school officials throughout this area.

Murder Charges Are Filed In Court at New Madrid

NEW MADRID -- First degree murder charges were filed against two persons who appeared before Judge Erle Wright this week in sessions of the New Madrid County Magistrate Court.

The two, Jeremiah Patton of New Madrid and Joe Willie Williams, both Negroes, were charged following separate incidents. Each waived his preliminary hearing in the Magistrate Court and was ordered held for trial in the Circuit Court with bonds set at $10,000 each.

Luke Norris and Maurice Dobbs, charged with forgery, also faced the Judge this week. Norris waived his preliminary hearing in the lower court and was held for the Circuit Court with his bond set at $500. Dobbs paid $18 court costs and his case was dismissed.

Alexander Marathon was bound over for trial in the Circuit Court with bond set at $2,000. Marathon was charged with burglary and larceny. He, too, waived his preliminary hearing in the Magistrate Court.

Three persons were fined for violations of the game laws; Roy C. Chambers and L. H. Moffett paid $35 each for possessing and transporting fish illegally and for fishing without a permit. Robert Parnell paid $15 for hunting without a permit.

Nineteen truckers were fined for exceeding legal load limits this week. Six of that number were fined amounts exceeding $100. A. A-1 Concrete Foundation paid $220 for an overage of 2750 pounds; Rubin Biggs paid $255 for 3100 pounds; Georgia-Pacific, $155 for 2100; Murphy Transportation, $145 for 2000; Burlington Industries, $130 for 1850; and Viking Freight, $110 for 1650.

Other violations were as follows; careless and imprudent driving -- P. V. Boyd, $35, Jerry Wayne Rackley, $25; vehicle overlength -- Trans Cold Express, $15, Charles D. Brewer, $11; excess speed -- Glen W. Wilmurth, $25, William L. Capehart, $20; vehicle overheight -- Sikeston Implement Company and Parkhill Trucking Company, $11 each; no operator's license -- Milton Backus, $15; improper muffler -- Larry Dee Taul, $11; improper operator's license -- Willis Albert West, $50; vehicle overwidth -- Massey Brothers & Cook, $15.

MATERIAL ABUNDANCE IS NOT ENOUGH

As always, with the year's ending, there was a flood of reports on what had happened in this nation and the world along with all manner of forecasts of things to come.

Many of these summaries dealt with the progress of the U. S. economy during momentous 1964. In area after area, industry after industry, there were notable gains, some of a truly spectacular dimension. Records fell like tenpins. All in all, despite certain dark sports, the system we call free enterprise brilliantly demonstrated its astonishing st[illegible] vigor, purposefulness, and imagination. And the material results were fully shared by the many, not just the few. In sum, the system demonstrated once again, and perhaps more effectively than ever before, its superiority over any yet devised by man.

Other backward looks concerned themselves with a world situation in which question mark is piled upon question mark, and confusion compounds confusion. It is very certain that reappraisals of our policy have now become unavoidable--toward Asia, Europe, Latin America, almost everywhere. Far-reaching changes took place in the world during the 12 brief months of the year. Powerful as we are, rich as we are as a nation, well meaning as we may be, there is no room for complacency.

And that can be said of our domestic affairs as well as our posture in the larger world. It is very easy, when incomes are high, the standard of living is at a peak, and we have reached an astonishing degree of material well-being, to become complacent and to let values become warped and atrophied.

The point is that material abundance is not enough. It is important--vastly so. But the long-run strength of a people cannot be measured just in terms of goods and services. It must be measured, rather, in what goes on within our hearts and minds. If human freedom, here or anywhere, is to be perpetuated it must continually be fought for. The weapons are many--self-reliance, a sense of individual responsibility, a concept of duty that has nothing to do with material advantage, and spiritual belief. These, among others, are eternal verities.

It may be hard to remember and to act on this in an era in which everything is huge--government, business and industry, the labor organizations, the farm groups. The individual, some may think, is dwarfed by the forces that surround his life. And so he will be if he takes that attitude. The very conditions of today present the individual with his greatest challenge. He, in the mass, decides what his nation shall be like. He, in the mass, decides, for example, whether he is to retain the dignity and the independence that the founders bequeathed to him or whether he is to supinely accept a welfare state in which he can only be a statistic whose rights and liberties grow ever fewer.

We need to constantly remember and reaffirm those principles and virtues which built this nation, during years in which living was incredibly hard and the price paid for freedom was blood and travail.

Thomas Jefferson wrote long ago, "The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time." We have the gift--now it is up to us to keep it intact.

There's a $580-million argument about whether whiplash injuries to the neck are serious or minor, whether whiplash is a medical term or one favored only by defense lawyers, and whether whiplash injuries even need treatment.

Oddly enough, one doctor who's heavily involved in the dispute is the same one who coined the word "whiplash." Dr. Harold Crowe, chairman of the surgical conference of the Los Angeles Orthopedic Hospital, coined the word 35 years ago. Today, after studying 300 cases of whiplash, he found that 282 had simple strains that would get well if left alone and only 18 required medical treatment. In his opinion, real whiplash is rare.

Dr. Crowe said that whiplash victims recover quickly after a court settlement.

It's been estimated by the Defense Research Institute, a research organization for defense lawyers, that whiplash injuries accounted for $580 million in compensation for alleged neck injuries in 1961 alone.

Whiplash cases are most often caused by rear-end collisions, a common form of accident especially on turnpikes and expressways. The National Safety Council estimates that nearly half of all turnpike accidents were motor vehicle collisions, "mostly rear-end collisions," the Council reports, and nearly one-third of the rear-end collisions involved a stopped vehicle.

To prevent rear-end collisions, one answer is to keep a proper interval between cars. Another solution, for night rear-end collisions, is being used by 15 states. This is the use of reflective license plates so that stopped or parked cars can be seen at night, even if their lights are turned off.

Motor vehicle collisions, including rear-end accidents, are a particular problem in farm or rural areas. Of 14,700 collisions reported by the National Safety Council in 1961, more than 12,000 occurred in rural areas.

The argument over whiplash will get hotter, in all probability. The accident rate in 1964. all accidents - was up rather than down.

There was this infuriating fellow in town who just couldn't be impressed. Nothing short of dynamite could move him.

Finally, the boys managed to take him duck hunting along with a rather special retriever. When the first duck was downed, the dog jumped out of the boat and walked across the water; he picked up the bird and returned the same way. This happened several times, but the fellow didn't even raise an eyebrow.

His exasperated boat-mates could take it no longer. "For crying out loud, didn't you notice anything unusual about the dog'" said one.

"Sure, the stupid mut can't swim."

Whenever I have found myself jilted or broke or insulted, I have found solace in work.

A reader who seems to agree that work is a panacea for whatever ails the human spirit, wonders why work satisfies us.

"Does it primarily satisfy our energy, duty, vanity, puritanism, honesty, or what?" he asks.

Work satisfies my self-respect. I don't enjoy holidays or recreations, except as dessert to top off a good day's work. At times I have been in a position where I did not have to work, but I never quit, because I knew I would not be happy.

I have never envied an idler. I have never longed for release from work.

I value friends highly, but I often suspect we pay too high a price for friendship. The lives of some of us are governed by the opinions of half a dozen friends. We submit to this domination as though these six people were essential to our happiness. I have pulled up roots a few times and transplanted myself. Always I have found new associations that were congenial. The new friends were rarely any better than the old, but they were about as good.

That the world is a small place was observed long ago. Each decade it gets smaller. As it contracts, due to rapid transportation and communication, it becomes more interesting. We become less dependent on our neighbors for companionship. Our friends may be scattered in a dozen cities, but we may see them almost as often as though they lived on our street.

Freedom from the pettiness of a restricted environment is one of the real gains of this century.

NO UPROAR, PLEASE!

The President signed his Captive Nations Week Proclamation early this year - on June 20 at 4 p.m., an hour (of a Saturday) at which reporters are hard to find around the White House. It not only languished for attention in the press, but was even weaker than the Kennedy proclamation in that it failed to mention that national self-determination for all nations is an established principle in American thinking. Neither proclamation, however, mentioned Communism as the malevolent force that kept these captive nations captive.

Dr. Lev. E. Dobriansky, a professor of economics at Georgetown University and author of the Captive Nations Week Resolution, enacted by Congress as a Public Law in 1959, points out that while few Americans were aware of anything special about the week of July 12-18, neither was Khrushchev aroused this year as he was in 1959!

Very cool, we're playing the Cold War. In fact, as Dr. Dobriansky says: "The road we are traveling and the rate at which we are going lead logically to the question: 'Who's next?' in the roll call of captive nations."

Who knows but what we may be next? And it's clearly Administration policy not to irritate the Keeper.

FAITHFUL FRIEND

The fellow at the bar kept ordering two drinks at a time. Not doubles, mind you, but two singles. "The other one is for a departed friend," he said to the puzzled bartender. This kept up every night for weeks. Finally, one night the fellow came in and ordered only one at a time.

"Something happen to your friend?" asked the bartender.

"No," replied the tippler. "He's fine. But I quit drinking."

Clothes made of paper will soon be for sale in America. Early items will probably be vests and articles of underwear, some of them designed to stand numerous launderings. Is this to be a new medium for printed advertising, with bargains pictured and described on T-shirts, and fire sales announced on union suits?

CHRISTMAS AMBASSADOR

The gaudy scarlet poinsettia plants that are now an accepted part of Christmas tradition are a relatively recent addition to the holiday scene. They were introduced into this country from Mexico a little over a hundred years ago. The man responsible for first bringing the plants north of the border was Dr. Joel Poinsett, onetime United States Ambassador to Mexico, and it was for this 19th century statesman that the plants were named.

CARE OF CLOTHES: Do not wait 'til you store a suit away before turning pockets inside out and giving them a good brushing. You'll be surprised how much dirt accumulates in them how quickly...It's ha[illegible]ewing gum off shoe soles [illegible]scrape; then get off as much as possible with a wad of cotton soaked in hot water; then saturate another wad with turpentine and rub off remainder.

FROM THE MAIL BAG: "If shirt sleeves have to be shortened, where should the shortening be done?" There's a difference of opinion on this -- whether it should be at top, middle or bottom of sleeves. Best way, in our opinion, is to remove cuff, shorten sleeve at this point and replace cuff. Shape of sleeve will not be affected.

THE FISH DIDN'T GET AWAY

Three men went up north on a fishing trip, leaving their wives at home. However, one wife discovered her husband's fishing tackle in his closet and called the other wives, who checked and found their husbands had also left their fishing equipment at home.

The three wives hopped into a car and drove up to the resort where their husbands were staying.

They asked the resort owner whether three men, naming them, had checked in.

"Sure," the manager replied, "but you hustlers are out of luck this time. They brought their wives."

If all mankind minus one, were of one opinion, and only one person were of the contrary opinion, mankind would be no more justified in silencing that one person, than he, if he had the power, would be justified in silening mankind.-- John Stuart Mill (1806-73).

I found this quotation in an advertising circular in which a man presented himself as an original thinker. At first reading I was jolted by Mill's extreme pronouncement; on second reading I was amused. Mill had a point, but I think he went too far. Most women would probably agree with him.

A U. S. EXPORT

Imitation, we have all heard, is the sincerest form of flattery. And, like so many of the old saws, this one has a full content of truth.

It can be applied to the American mass distribution system which has found enthusiastic imitators throughout much of the civilized world.

Some years ago American-type supermarkets were shown at the great Brussels Fair and in a number of other major European cities. The chain store people did the job at the request of interested U. S. government agencies. The markets were smash hits. And the multitude of foreign consumers who saw them made it abundantly clear that this was the kind of distribution they wanted. So enterprising European merchants bowed to popular demand, and supermarkets have been established in many European cities where they enjoy a flourishing trade.

This is a far cry from the centuries-old retail system whereby one had to go to one store for meat, to another for vegetables and so on until the market basket was filled. Here in the U. S. we take the mass distribution principle for granted. But when it was first pioneered by the chains a great many skeptics considered this merchandising innovation totally unpractical and foresaw nothing but failure.

As we all know, they were 100 per cent wrong. Mass distribution, based as it is on big turnover at small unit profits, has made a vitally important contribution to our living standards. And now it is doing the same thing abroad.

WHERE YOUR TAX MONEY GOES

Congressman Abele of Ohio has looked into some of the more unusual federal appropriations of our tax money. As recounted by the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, here are a few:

$2,100 to look into the behavior of barren-ground caribou.

These studies are of specialized value. But it is difficult to see how they are the responsibility of the federal government. They represent the sort of things that is, and should be, undertaken by universities, foundations and the various private research centers.

The amounts involved, it will be argued, are small. But a total of all the extra-curricular activities, so to speak, that the government now supports would reach a mighty impressive figure. Economical government can be achieved only if every nonessential expenditure is eliminated -- whether the sum involved be $10,000 or $10 million and whether the project involves a power plant or the social behavior of ants!

H. L. Hunt Says

HOW TO RULE THE WORLD

Suppose that you are a leading member of a very small group of men holding views utterly foreign to those professed by the great majority, yet ambitious to seize power in every nation on earth.

Suppose that your group is outlawed in every nation, with all the established guardians of morality and order against you.

Suppose that in spite of these obstacles, you and your confederates intend to rule the world. What will your strategy be?

You will have to work night and day to break down the established order and the moral standards of every nation in the world.

You will have to try to teach men that white is black, and day is night; that freedom is slavery, and slavery is freedom.

You will have to burn down every house standing in order to build your new dwellings upon the ashes.

But to do this, you cannot simply rush out with a firebrand. You must penetrate, infiltrate, and gradually undermine the foundations of all that stands against you. And as the weakened nations fall, one by one, into your hands, you must convince those remaining free that despite all the evidence, you have no designs upon any of them.

If you are a communist, this is the only strategy that can ever bring you success. And it will fit your purpose to use it all over the world.

Doc. Duncan Says

It would be the part of prudence for Unk to stop, look and listen, and take a close look around home. With bonded, private, and public debt, plus taxes on consumers, bordering on calamity, most thinking people feel that a hesitation in our economy could trigger a rash of absentee land-lords selling homes, farms, and etc. for taxes and bonded debts like in the 1930s, only multiplied many times. This could trigger a takeover by the people. Call it what you may, it would be ironical indeed if Unk spent his all to prop up other nations then had no prop of his own. It's been a beautiful dream but it's time to wake up to the facts of life, economics and one way friendships.

Hal Boyle

Man has always yearned for a Utopia on earth - whether he deserves one or not.

The inauguration of Lyndon Baines Johnson as 36th President of the United States puts into motion one of the greatest drives in history in this direction - the achievement of what he has called the "Great Society."

Some of his countrymen cavil at the term. They think it grandiose —in effect, no more than another political slogan.

But it is hard to see why becoming a "Great Society" should be less than the American goal. Surely in the long dark narrative of the human race, no other major power has been in a better position to make a better human society, a more livable environment.

We have the resources and the skills to house our people satisfactorily, to feed them well, to improve their health and to educate them to a higher level. We have the ability to do all this -- if we but have the will.

Some 2,500 years ago a Chinese philosopher named Laotse remarked, "The journey of a thousand miles begins with the first step."

The United States already has taken many steps toward the achievement of a "Great Society." It also has taken a few side steps — probably some backward steps, too — along the way. But from the time of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, the splendid promise of the American dream has led us through wilderness toward the creation of a more durable fate and a more humane existence.

As a practical man who knows practical politics, Johnson is certain to try to make our next steps forward giant ones. Although there may be —surely will be — partisan arguments about methods, the end in view ultimately is nonpartisan.

There are hopeful portents that the goal of a "Great Society" is attainable. While we live in the most murderous century of all, we also live in the most humanitarian century of all. Probably never have more men slain each other than in the 20th century; yet never have more men been helped by each other.

We've made more widows than any past generation. But we have also done more to conquer disease, tear down barriers of space and time, increase knowledge, and distribute the fruits of our labor more equitably.

We haven't stood still. We have come a long way.

Perhaps we have even come far enough to realize that no one land, no matter how strong, can safely remain forever as an island of prosperity in a vast puddle of restless poverty.

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON -- It's been traditional throughout most of American history that the President and the Vice President of the United States have not loved each other. Sometimes their enmity has been open, as when Vice President Charles G. Dawes failed to turn up for a tie vote to aid President Calvin Coolidge in the Senate. Sometimes it has smoldered below the surface, as with Richard Nixon and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

But the vice presidency, entrusted mainly with the duty of waiting for the President to die, is not conducive to harmony between the two top men of any administration.

This week, two men of great vigor, great experience, and somewhat opposite backgrounds begin four years as a team. And the big question asked by the politicians is: Will Lyndon Johnson and Hubert Humphrey get along together?

Their backgrounds would appear to lead them along opposite paths.

Hubert began life over a South Dakota drugstore. Lyndon began life as a Texas schoolteacher. Hubert got into politics with the backing of the radical Farmer-Labor party, to become mayor of Minneapolis, then ran for the Senate in 1948, with Southern Democrat conservatives putting money into the campaign to defeat him. They remembered how Hubert had stormed the Democratic convention in 1944 to oppose the watered-down civil rights plank and tell the Democrats: "Get out of the shadow of states rights and walk forthrightly in the bright sunshine of human rights."

--CAUTIOUS LBJ--

Johnson began his political life as assistant to Rep. Richard Kleberg of Texas, co-owner of the King ranch and one of the most conservative leaders of Texas democracy. Lyndon's climb up the political ladder was backed by Texas gas and oil, though he also sat at the feet of a practical Texas liberal, Sam Rayburn.

Johnson played his cards cautiously while Hubert was incautious, courageous, and, in the opinion of many politicians, indiscreet. He was probably first in proposing more lost cause which later became victorious causes than any man since William Jennings Bryan. But by the time they won victories, other people had been able to claim credit for them.

He took a stand against nuclear testing seven years before John F. Kennedy negotiated a treaty putting it into law. He persuaded the State Department ten years ago to from a committee to explore disarmament. This was seven years before Eisenhower acted on the suggestion.

He proposed food for India, food for East Berlin, cultural exchanges between the United States and Communist nations, long before the Eisenhower administration adopted them as official American policy. And eight years ago he proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps which has now become part of Johnson's anti-poverty program.

Humphrey is a more polished speaker than Johnson. He talks in machine-gun bursts, pours out both humor and vitriol; has coined such phrases as: "The symbol of the Republican Party should be the mole -- it sees only in the darkness, is blinded by the sunlight."

Furthermore Humphrey bucked Lyndon Johnson for the presidency in 1956 and bucked him hard. And when Lyndon was Senate leader during the Eisenhower administration, Humphrey was one of those restless Democrats who believed LBJ was pulling his punches, wanted him to be more aggressive against Ike.

This nettled Johnson, and the two men had a showdown.

"I was trying to make you a better leader," Humphrey told him.

In brief, all the ingredients are present in the personalities and backgrounds of these two men to cause the usual friction between President and Vice President.

Yet they share the same goals. Both have seen a lot of poverty, both share the goal of making the United States a better place to live in.

Johnson can never forget his experience as Texas Administrator of the National Youth Administration, the men selling apples on the street corners during the days of the Great Depression. Humphrey was a clerk in his family's drugstore, and up until recently had to go out and fill speaking engagements to augment his slender Senate salary.

Though he isn't as eloquent as Humphrey, Johnson is also just as dedicated to peace. He has gone much further than his State Department advisors in working for arms reduction and better East-West relations.

But the most important bond between these two men is mutual respect. Both have been through the political mill, both have differed vigorously but fought hard on the same side politically. Battles create respect and friendship.

Said the new Vice President recently to a friend: "Lyndon is going to be a great president. He is working like hell. He knows government -- no one knows government better. He wants to be a great president, and he will."

That's the background of the two top men of the Johnson Administration -- two men who can growl at each other, kid each other, but -- as I have watched them -- basically love each other. I'll report on their joint problems in another column later.

New York: -- Revolutionary youth cadres, bearded like their heroes, Lenin and Trotsky, have been spotted on the fringes of recent mass strikes here. They were driven off. Their literature was dumped and destroyed. Warnings were dispatched via the grapevine -- they'd be mauled if they showed again.

They did not show. They had put in their time on the "action front." Their assignment had been to attempt to stir the picket lines. Their leaflets had urged the rejection of settlements and the prolongation of the strikes. Though on the waterfront they had run from huskier men, they had proven their willingness to attempt to "infiltrate." They scurried because they were new at this "action program." They had taken "party discipline." They had proven they were good "Mao-ists" -- followers of little parties which are the vogue amongst the "in" group of the beatnik youth now dubbed by one national labor chief as the "sickniks."

But the young hero worshippers, who see Mao Tse-tung as the dialectical successor to Lenin and Trotsky, are disturbing others besides the authorities and the labor leaders. The Mao-ists, sneering at the old Communist party chiefs as capitalist deviationists, are alarming the officials of the U. S. section of the Moscow controlled international.

Without new youthful recruits the American Communist Party will wither away. The average age of its 10,000 members is upwards of 55 years. Many of its leaders have died in the past year. Its hitherto secret regional units have been warning the Communists' national office here on West 23rd St. that there must be new blood--and soon.

So, word has come from Moscow for the Communist Party U.S.A. to revitalize itself. It has been told that the activity on the university fronts is just not enough. The Party must now come into the open. It must rebuild itself around a network of clubs.

The theme of the revival must be anti-war. It must use the clubs as a base for an ever increasing number of demonstrations urging the withdrawal from Viet Nam and all military bases around the world.

Action of the clubs must be put on a "concentration" basis. They must be coordinated by the Communists' national office. They must do the same thing, urge the same action, run the same type of demonstrations on the streets at about the same time.

The national office must be beefed up, said the dictum. And the new national office organizers must not stay in New York. They are to go out and service their old clubs, revive tottering ones and build new units.

The concentration centers, according to what has been learned of discussions at regional meetings of the Party's high command, must be in the Midwest. There must be special "saturation" of the "industrial" belt. This means western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Michigan.

In the industrial section the emphasis must be on "working class youth." Once these are found, organized and trained, some of them must be peeled off and sent south for infiltration there.

During recent conferences the Party officials have been promised ample funds for the youth drive. To avoid appearances of control and financing from Moscow, the Party as a ruse has been ordered to launch a fund-raising campaign for the fight against the U.S. on the judicial front.

The Communist Party goes on trial in Washington on March 15 on charges of failing to register as a Communist action group under the 1950 Internal Security Act.

The Communist international will make this a global cause celebre. Committees and parties on all continents have been ordered to pass resolutions protesting the trial as a revival of "McCarthyism."

At the right moment the American Communist Party will launch a campaign for some $50,000. The money will pour in. It always does, mostly in cash. Then the money can be used for any purpose the Party chooses, including the new youth recruitment and club revival and delegations to Congress and vigils at the White House.

The Party hopes its new [illegible] will offer sufficiently exciting competition to the Mao-ist youth to pull the young people into the Party.

There also is no doubt that the streets of the nation's big cities will be the stages for this turbulent drama.

Chapter 4 "Social Problems" was given by Mrs. William Dillon

An interesting original skit was presented by Mrs. James Kesler and Mrs. Nelson Gruen on "Problems of a City Manager in a New Nation".

The class was dismissed by Rev. James Estep. The next meeting will be held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 in the Fellowship room. Everyone is invited to attend.

Those attending other than previously mentioned were Mrs. Fred McWilliams, Mrs. Leslie Frazier, Mrs. Gladys Crumpecker, Mrs. Dessie Shepherd and Mrs. Frank Kesler.

PAMELA MICK, daughter of Mrs. Louise Mick celebrated her ninth birthday with a party at her home in Canalou, January 10th. Games were played with Angelia Cude and Sarilyn Greenlee winning the prizes. The many gifts were then opened and the children were served cake, ice cream and punch, at a table decorated with balloons and orange and yellow streamers.

The hostesses were Mrs. Louise Mick and Miss Bertha Gail Landers. Those attending were Sarilyn Greenlee, Angelia Cude, Terri Lowery, Tam Lowery, Jeanie Summers, Rita Tharp, Debbie Crider, Chuckie McCann, Johnny Spencer, Laura Dawne Ford, Sandra Landers, Debbie Landers, Kimberly Latham, Melony Mick, Teresa Maloy, Rebecca Drake, Lorrie Ann, Mr. Dan Ford, Mr. William Lawsin, Miss JoAnn Landers, Mrs. Genice Latham, Mrs. Pauline Landers and Mrs. Jim Kasinger.

Rose Gate Garden Club Have Meeting

The Rose Gate Garden Club met at the Methodist Youth Center January 18th with ten members answering to roll call, Miss Jane Wilkerson presiding.

Mrs. J. M. Pitman presented Mr. Paul Barks of the USDA, Plant Pest Control Unit, who gave a most interesting talk on damaged soy beans showing pictures of field of the crops infested with "pests." Several farms in the surrounding counties have been quarantined until these pests have been controlled during ten years of rotation crops with the soy beans.

The new year books were given to members present.

Miss Wilkerson announced that the Meadow Lane Garden Club and The Rose Gate Garden Club would have a Fall Flower Show October 9-10.

ANN LANDERS

Answers your problems

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married only a month and am having troubles I never expected. I've mentioned my problem to a few people but all they do is laugh. They think I'm joking.

Two weeks ago when Denny and I returned from our honeymoon his dog was very glad to see him. Shep had been in the kennels and I figured he would be especially happy to see his master. But it turns out Shep is more important to Denny than I thought. Denny confessed the dog has been sharing his bed for seven years. I was shocked and said so. Denny said "I'm sorry but I can't change things now. It would break Shep's heart."

I haven't had a good night's sleep in two weeks and I don't know what to do. This is no gag. I'm dead serious. You hear about all sorts of kooky problems and I hope you can solve mine. -- HONEYMOON GONE TO THE DOGS

Dear Gone: If your husband can't part with his bow wow at beddy-by time, order twin beds and tell him you hope he and Shep will be very happy --way over there.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a fairly attractive private secretary on the lying side of 30. All the men I work with (or near) are too old, too young, or too married. The women around here are no help. If they knew of an eligible man they'd grab him for themselves.

Every day is like the day before -- no incentive to dress smartly or to change my hair. Who would notice? The jokes I heard today are retreads of the ones I heard last year.

My job pays well but I am dying of boredom. Since you are the lady with all the answers, how about tossing one my way? --SLEEPY HOLLOW

Dear Sleepy: Anyone as bored as you are can't possibly be doing a good job. Do yourself and the company a favor and remove the corpse from the office.

Get a new job. You need to see some new faces and hear some new jokes. People often become hopeless victims of monotony because they are too lethargic to extricate themselves. Get going, Sister. Life can be beautiful -- but ya' gotta help.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me if I did right or wrong. My sister's husband became involved with another woman and she found out about it. They have four lovely children. Divorce is outlawed by her religion so my sister obtained a legal separation.

My husband and I used to see a great deal of them as a couple but when they began to have trouble we decided not to take sides.

Last Friday my husband ran into my brother-in-law and brought him home to dinner. We had a lovely evening and it was pleasant to see him again. Not one word was said about his personal problems.

This morning my sister phoned to say she was disgusted with us for entertaining "that louse" and since we have shown friendship for him she wants nothing more to do with us. Is she justified in her position? --BLACK SHEEP

Dear Sheep: Your sister has no right to tell you whom you may entertain in your home. If she chooses to interpret your act of friendship toward her estranged husband as an act of unfriendliness toward her, I'd say she is the loser, not you.

A mature person would respect your neutrality but obviously your sister does not qualify.

Lonely? Uncomfortable? Just not able to make friends? Write for ANN LANDERS' new booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

All About BABIES

LIFE WITH BABY CAN BE A JOY

By Mary K. Macdonald, R.N.

Listening to baby gurgle, seeing the miracle of that first smile, observing baby's response to the marvels of a strange new world -- all of these can be sources of wonder and excitement for the young mother.

Too often, however, the new mother in an unfamiliar role, finds she has a fussing baby on her hands. The unnecessary fears and tensions that result are enough to spoil any enjoyment she might otherwise get from her offspring.

Experienced mothers know that a baby who is physically comfortable and receives a full measure of love and tenderness, will be a happy baby. By observing a few simple rules designed to promote baby's physical comfort and provide the sense of security baby needs, the new and inexperienced mother can spare herself many hours of anxiety.

1. Sleep is important to the new infant. The mattress should be firm, bedding smooth and well tucked in, coverings light and loose to allow free movement.

2. Before baby can move about in his bed by himself, change his position frequently.

3. Keep the temperature in baby's room as even as possible, between 70-75 degrees.

4. Baby's room should be well ventilated but never drafty.

5. Diapers should be soft, absorbent and non-irritating. Even carefully laundered diapers may irritate baby's delicate skin unless all soap has been removed by repeated rinsings. Diaper services guard against this by an elaborate rinsing process and by impregnating the diaper with special antiseptics to help lessen the chances of diaper rash.

6. Make sure baby is always in a clean dry diaper. Cleanse the skin carefully with each change.

7. Don't overdress baby, indoors or out.

8. Try not to take baby outdoors when the weather is windy or damp. In winter, dress baby warmly, covering his hands and ears but not his face.

9. Let your baby feel that everything you do for him is a pleasure to you -- never an unpleasant chore.

10. Play with baby when he's fully awake, after his nap or before his bath. Talk to him, fondle him, rock him in your arms. During the first few weeks, you can't spoil him with too much love.

Dixie Band Camp Moves To Jonesboro

JONESBORO -- Dixie Band Camp, one of the leading music camps in the country, will be held this summer on the campus of Arkansas State College at Jonesboro, according to an official announcement made by Clint Walker, President of Dixie Band Camp. The camp previously had been held at Monticello.

In making the announcement of the moving of the camp, Mr. Walker stated that the dates for this summer will be June 13 through July 3.

According to Don Minx, Director of Bands at Arkansas State, completely air-conditioned housing will be available for as many as 500 students at the camp. Also, both rehearsal halls will be air-conditioned. Formal concerts will be held in the new Carl R. Reng Student Center.

R. B. "Scrubby" Watson, well-known Dean of Arkansas Band Directors, will be serving his 27th year as Director of the Blue Band and Dean of the Camp. Camp policies and schedules will remain the same as those established in the previous 26 years of existence.

John Alexander, Assistant Band Director and trumpet instructor at Arkansas State, will teach trumpet again this year at Dixie and will serve as coordinator of physical facilities for the camp.

National Children's Dental Health Week Feb. 7 to 13th

School dental health programs all over America the week of February 7th to 13th will help educate children in how to have clean, healthy teeth. Not only to please the family dentist, but because tooth health in childhood is directly related to growing up into a strong physically good adult.

This dental health week for children was begun seventeen years ago as a one-day event by health education organizations but was subsequently expanded to a week. It is endorsed and promoted by the American Dental Association's large membership of dentists and dental hygienists. The major objective of the Week, as described by Dr. Perry Sandell, educational director of A. D. A. is to further the teaching of proper care of the teeth to early establish good dental health habits for children, to the end that they grow to adulthood with sound teeth.

Besides the A. D. A., state and local dental societies support the Children's Dental Health Week and encourage locally such projects as movies, demonstrations and other related entertainment in the schools.

The country's apple growers have been actively interested in these promotions in schools and elsewhere and through the National Apple Institute have for many years sponsored research on fresh apples in preventive dentistry. Because of well substantiated scientifically done research relative to apples and other fresh fruits and vegetables, dental health authorities endorse apples today for the cleansing action in the mouth, the juiciness and texture of the apple making an excellent "nature's toothbrush".

An apple is easily carried in a school lunch box, or served in a school cafeteria. Eaten last, after sandwich, cookie and glass of milk, dental health authorities say that the apple cleanses, and thus helps preserve teeth. The same idea works for grownups who like a snack at night or any other time. Dental health is of importance at any age after that first tooth makes its appearance, and especially in those early school years when appetites are big, and eating--something -- seems continuous, from breakfast until bed time.

Two Casseroles Will Delight Busy Mothers

Casserole cookery isn't an American idea but it's certainly a popular one.

When a busy homemaker can pop meat and vegetables into one dish and bake in about a half an hour, more or less, it makes easy work of lunch or supper.

Both of these casseroles rely on convenience foods, points out Reba Staggs, home economist for their ease of preparation, their speed in cooking.

Luncheon meat is very easily cubed to go with a plentiful supply of canned corn. It's also a pleasing combination when added to one of the cooked frozen vegetables in sauce. Just cook the meat and vegetables until heated through.

Desert chili has both the flavor and texture to do the honors at a casual supper with friends or a main dish for a teen-age party. Harmonize it with a tossed green salad and fresh fruits for dessert. Look at the simplicity of putting this together!

Midwest Casserole

1 can (12 ounces) luncheon meat, cut in ½-inch cubes
½ cup coarsely crushed cracker crumbs
¼ cup milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 can (1 pound, 1 ounce) cream-style corn
1 tablespoon minced onion
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dry mustard

Combine cracker crumbs and milk. Add egg, cream-style corn, minced onion, salt, pepper and dry mustard. Mix well and fold in cubed luncheon meat. Pour into 1¼-quart casserole. Bake, uncovered, in a moderate oven (350° F.) 30 to 35 minutes. 4 servings.

Desert Chili

2 cans (15 ounces each) chili (without beans)
1 cup chopped onion
4 cups crushed corn chips
2 cups grated sharp Cheddar cheese

Heat chili and onions. Place about ⅓ of the crushed corn chips on the bottom of a 12x8-inch baking dish. Arrange in layers over the corn chips, ½ of the following: chili-onion mixture and grated cheese. Repeat with ⅓ of the corn chips and remaining chili and cheese. Top with remaining corn chips. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 25 minutes. 6 to 8 servings.

Young Traveler Togs

Since winter vacations in sunny climes are becoming more and more popular even the small fry were not forgotten in this resort season's fashion collections. In blue and white rayon and linen blend, the A-line sleeveless popover (left) has a shallow V neckline. White dress underneath has pleated flounced skirt with contrast stitching at hem, sleeves and neck. Two-piece white birdseye pique cruise dress for the young jet set (right) has front-buttoned A-line overblouse and box-pleated skirt. The buttons are brass. These are Helen Lee designs.

Kelly And Delta Win In "B" Games

ORAN -- The Delta Bobcats pulled off the biggest upset yet in this years Scott-Mississippi Tournament by trouncing down Kelly 58-49. Oran showed more reasons why they were seeded number one by dropping an 85-57 bomb on the East Prairie Eagles.

DELTA 58
KELLY 49

Delta, led by Ronnie Smith with 20 points, pulled over the Kelly Hawks 58-49. Kelly was the number two seeded team in the tourney. Delta was rightfully seeded, but apparently after last night's game it wasn't quite high enough, for they were number three.

Both teams battled the first frame to come out with a deadlocked 12-12 score. The Bobcats made their big move in the second period by dumping in 15 points while limiting Kelly to 8 to come in at the half leading 27-20.

The Hawks trying to rally, came out the third period to stuff in 16, but Delta was not to be pulled abreast of as they hit 15 to go into the final frame with a 7 point advantage. From there it was Delta.

ORAN 85
EAST PRAIRIE 57

The Oran Eagles went out in front to stay the first period to lead by 14, 26-12. They increased their lead to an 18 point bulge as first half play ended. East Prairie never saw daylight from there.

Oran's play was blended primarily into four big pointmakers. Tom Anderson led with 22 and Robert Johnson came in second with 18. Donnie Metz and Ken Steimle each drilled 17.

Chicago Best Ever In Pennant Race

The Chicago White Sox strengthened their weak spot in acquiring catcher Johnny Romano and became a stronger American League pennant threat than ever.

Cleveland moved into the pennant contention by getting back right-handed slugger Rocky Colavito, who also figured to make the turnstiles click merrily.

Kansas City got some new faces.

That appears to sum up the three-club, eight-player deal the White Sox, Indians and Athletics announced Wednesday.

The multiple transaction, originated at the baseball convention in Houston last month, went like this:

The Indians gave up Romano, pitcher Tommy John and outfielder Tommie Agee to the White Sox. Chicago sent outfielders Jim Landis and Mike Hershberger and a still unnamed pitcher to Kansas City and catcher Camilo Carreon to Cleveland. Kansas City sent Colavito to the Indians.

The unnamed new Kansas City pitcher is believed to be either veteran Johnny Buzhardt, Dave DeBusschere or rookie Fred Talbot.

The Indians, who have suffered both on the field and at the gate ever since they traded Colavito to Detroit back in 1960, not only have added right-handed hitting power which they sorely lacked, but regained one of the most popular players ever to wear an Indian uniform.

Gabe Paul estimates the Rock's presence will add at least another 150,000 to Cleveland's attendance next season. The Indians' club president also believes the 31-year-old outfielder's acquisition will make a pennant contender out of last year's sixth-place club. Despite a .274 batting average, Colavito blasted 34 home runs and drove in 102 runs.

Charles Finley, owner of the Athletics, rejected a flat $300,000 offer from Paul for the slugger at the Houston meetings.

The offer came the day after the Indians had acquired Chuck Hinton, a right-handed hitting outfielder, in a trade with Washington.

Cleveland now has four top outfielders in Colavito, Hinton, Leon Wagner and fleet center fielder Vic Davelillo. Manager Birdie Tebbetts may use Rocky at first, or switch Hinton to second, so he can employ all of his power in a balanced line-up.

Getting Romano back fills the White Sox biggest need. Catching was Chicago's biggest weakness in 1964 when the team finished only one game behind the champion New York Yankees.

A left-handed long-ball hitter, the 30-year-old backstop figures to add sock to the White Sox batting order. He hit 19 home runs despite a long layoff due to an injury. He batted .241.

Traded away by the White Sox to the Indians after the 1959 season, Romano developed into one of the league's better catchers. He was named twice to the All-Star team.

Lopez figures that John, a left-hander, will take up some of the southpaw slack created by the departure of left-handers Frank Baumann and Don Mossi.

It's Evansville Still On Top Small Top Ten

The state of Indiana has only one team representing it among the first 10 in The Associated Press' weekly small-college basketball poll today. But it's a mighty good one, the Evansville Aces, who show no signs of relinquishing their position as kings of their group.

Actually, the states of North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania boast the most teams in the latest top ten, two each. Texas, Louisiana and Tennessee also have one apiece.

Evansville picked up 10 first-place votes and 135 points in the balloting by 14 regional experts based on games through last Saturday. The Aces upped their record to 13-0 last week with conquests of Kentucky Wesleyan and St. Joseph's, Ind.

The top ten, with first-place votes in parentheses, and points:

"He's a daddy cat," Mother replied patiently.

"How do we know he's a daddy cat?" the boy asked.

An expectant hush fell over the bus, and the passengers listened attentively to see how Mother would handle this one. She was ready for the challenge. "He's got whiskers, hasn't he?" she said.

Nick Altrock Dies After Long Illness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nick Altrock, one of baseball's most famous funnyman, is dead at 88.

Altrock died Wednesday night after a lengthy illness. He had suffered a stroke 2½ years ago.

Once one of the American League's top pitchers, a sore arm sent Altrock into the comedy field where his zany antics captivated first the rock-ribbed baseball fans, and later, vaudeville audiences.

The showmanship first came to light when he pitched for Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast League before the turn of the century. One day, he gave up a walk and then picked off the runner.

Pleased with himself, he purposely walked seven more men during the game, picking off six of them.

As a comedian, Altrock worked first as a single, capitalizing on a shadow-boxing routine, one-man wrestling bouts, juggling and mimicry. Then the late Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Nationals, teamed him up with another clown, Al Schacht.

The two became fixtures at World Series contests and were a big drawing card for the Nats both at home and on the road.

They were headliners in vaudeville and even made a movie short in Hollywood. They feuded in the early 1930s, and although the act continued, they seldom spoke to each other.

The two were best known for their patomimes of the sports highlights of the day. They enacted the Dempsey-Firpo fight, did a takeoff on Notre Dame's Four Horsemen and made like tennis queens Suzanne Lenglen and Mary Browne.

Most of the wins came in three big seasons with the Chicago White Sox. He was 19-14 in 1904, 21-10 the following year and 20-13 in 1906.

In 1906, he helped hurl the Hitless Wonders to the American League pennant and the world championship. He was chosen over big Ed Walsh as the Chisox starter in the Series, and came through with a 2-1 victory over the rival Chicago Cubs.

Altrock and his wife have made their home in Washington since 1927, but he will be buried in Cincinnati, the city where he was born.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Boston Still Going Like They Will Not Lose

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Boston Celtics haven't lost a game since last year. The way they're going, they may not lose any until next year.

The perennial National Basketball Association champions won their 15th straight outing Wednesday night, crushing the Baltimore Bullets 131-105 with a 40-point splurge in the last quarter.

That inched the Celtics to within two of the NBA's record winning streak, and they could have the mark all to themselves by Sunday.

In other games Wednesday night, the Cincinnati Royals spurted away from the Detroit Pistons in the final five minutes to wrap up a 102-90 decision, and the Los Angeles Lakers boosted their Western Division lead to one full game over idle St. Louis with a 119-103 victory over the New York Knickerbockers.

With Oscar Robertson held to 11 points — only the second time in 16 contests he has failed to top 20 this season — Jerry Lucas took over as the Cincinnati hero. Lucas grabbed 37 rebounds to set a record for Detroit's Cobo Arena and also scored 18 points. Jack Twyman tallied 21 to pace the Royals, who twice blew 10-point leads before pulling away. Eddie Miles topped Detroit with 20 points.

Boston blew a 15-point lead when Baltimore pulled to within 91-90 as Walt Bellamy scored 16 of his 32 points in the third period for the Bullets.

But the Celtics stretched their advantage to 11 points in less than three minutes and won going away. Sam Jones scored 10 of his 34 points in the final period and John Havlicek nine of his 25. Baltimore scored only 15 points in the last quarter.

A 113-112 loss to New York last Dec. 17 is the only defeat for Boston in its last 23 games. With a 40-7 record, the Celtics have opened a 7½-game lead over Cincinnati in the Eastern Division.

The NBA record of 17 in a row was set by the old Washington Capitols in 1946-47 and tied by The Celtics in 1959-60.

John D. Crow Wants To Go Or Just Quit

ST. LOUIS (AP) --John David Crow, a 29-year-old running back who has scored more touchdowns than any player in St. Louis football Cardinal history, said Wednesday he would retire if the team wouldn't trade him.

Crow said he felt that he wasn't played as much as he should have been in the 1964 National Football League season or "as much as I wanted." He was in St. Louis for a check of a knee injured in a late season game.

He left after the examination by a team physician for his home in Pine Bluff, Ark.

Crow has scored 51 touchdowns since 1958 with the Big Red--a team record--and also holds the club mark at 784 for rushing attempts. He is second in yards gained with 3,489 behind former Cardinal back Charley Trippi, who had 3,511 yards rushing.

KANSAS CITY (AP) -- Oregon State, Texas Tech, Western Kentucky and Pennsylvania were named today as the host schools for first-round games of the NCAA Basketball Championships.

First-round games will be played March 6, 8 or 9. Bernie Shively, Kentucky athletic director and tourney chairman, said first-round games in the Mideast at Western Kentucky will be March 8, but dates at the other sites haven't been selected.

Winners in the first round will advance to regionals set for March 12-13 at Maryland, Kentucky, Kansas State and Brigham Young.

The four regional champions will meet in Portland, Ore., March 19-20, to decide the NCAA crown.

Both Teams Are Undefeated In Conference Play

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- The whole bag of league marbles could be at stake Saturday when Southeast Missouri State travels to Warrensburg for a showdown game with Central Missouri State.

Both teams own clean 4-0 league slates, with six games to go. Both have won two games from other top contenders. Southeast Missouri's record includes a home win against Southwest Missouri and a road victory over Northeast Missouri, while Central has topped Northeast Missouri both at home and on the road. Both squads have overall 12-3 marks.

The game shapes up as a battle between two teams well-matched in scoring and rebounding ability. Current statistics reveal that SEMO is averaging 83-70 over all opponents, while the Mules have been averaging 76-67. Both teams have an average of ten rebounds more per game than their foes.

Guard Mike Gross of Maplewood provides the biggest scoring punch for the Indians, averaging 18.7 points per game. Center Jack Becker of St. Charles has been the main bulwark in rebounding, getting 11.3 per game. Becker is also the Indians' number - two scorer at 13.9.

For the Mules, winners of the MIAA Holiday Tournament and favorites to derail SEMO on the road to a fifth-straight league crown, flashy forward Cozel Walker is the leading scorer with an 18-point average and runner-up in rebounding with 10 per game. Walker, a transfer from Regis College in Colorado, was named Most Valuable Player in the Denver area last year.

Smoking May Stimulate Blockage of Small Arteries

Heavy cigarette smoking may be implicated in the blockage and ultimate destruction of smaller blood vessels, particularly in the legs, a New York surgeon said today.

The possible connection between smoking habits and a condition known as peripheral atherosclerotic occlusive disease, was reported by Jere W. Lord, M. D., in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

This condition -- in essence atherosclerosis of the arteries supplying the skin and outer muscle layers -- is caused by accumulations of fatty like deposits known as plaque on the artery walls. Eventually the plaque may entirely block the flow of blood.

Since circulation is by nature the least efficient in the legs, it is here that atherosclerosis of the peripheral blood vessels is more likely to occur.

Dr. Lord, of the New York University Post - Graduate Medical School, said a study of 100 consecutive patients operated on for atherosclerotic occlusion of the peripheral blood vessels showed that 94 were heavy cigarette smokers. Of the remaining patients, four were classified as casual smokers and two were non-smokers.

"Heavy smokers" Dr. Lord defined as those who consumed a pack or more of cigarettes daily for at least 20 years. Those patients who smoked less than a pack a day or who had been smoking for less than 20 years he classified as "casual smokers."

The study was conducted among non-diabetic patients between the ages of 40 and 70. Diabetics and persons over 70 were excluded, he explained, because of the possibility that they are more susceptible to plaque formations.

Four pathways exist by which heavy cigarette smoking may contribute to atherosclerotic plaque, Dr. Lord said.

1. Tobacco may cause an allergic-type reaction in some individuals, with the arterial walls as the "target."

2. Inhaled tobacco smoke, by some as yet unexplained mechanism, is known to increase the fatty acid content of the blood. The significance of this is that fatty acids are a primary ingredient of plaque.

4. It is known that smoking stimulates the heart output instepped up blood flow, in turn, reduces the pressure exerted on arterial walls, creating a condition more favorable to plaque formation.

Some plaque formation is to be expected in older persons, Dr. Lord said, "As long as blood flows it seems inevitable that atherosclerotic lesions, not necessarily of clinical significance, will appear eventually in every human who lives into the ninth and tenth decades."

The findings of the study, however, point out that in some individuals heavy cigarette smoking may accelerate the occurrence of atherosclerotic lesions, he said. Thus obstructive arterial disease "appears at an earlier age and to a more severe degree."

In any event, Dr. Lord concluded, the study tends to make it clear that "in the non-diabetic non-smoker, atherosclerotic peripheral arterial occlusive disease is an unusual finding under the age of 70 years."

The Big Car Or Small Car: Which Safer?

By JERRY SHEEHAN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Steel clashed with steel in a mighty crunch. Glass exploded and tinkled to the pavement. The Great Connecticut Car Crash had been, its promoters believed, a success.

Sheehan

Somebody in the state police had a suspicion that small cars—especially foreign ones—were dangerous to occupants and should be kept off the highway. He went about "proving" his thesis by pitting Detroit juggernauts against the compacts.

The results of this demolition derby caused anguish among foreign and domestic small car manufacturers. The little cars clearly came through the encounter second best.

At one point a driverless big sedan missed its mark and sped around the area like a monster seeking to turn on its master. It was captured and sent careening into its European victim.

Small car defenders yelled foul. They pointed out that the small car hand brakes had been set before the collision. This was like nailing a man's shoes to the floor before hitting him with a poleax. Also, the protective spare tire in front of rear-engined cars had been removed.

To undercut the big car-big safety theory, a Texas auto dealer flattened a luxury-sized car with a truck.

Safety experts have now stepped into the controversy in hopes of creating light instead of noise. Among them, Dr. James Malfetti of Columbia University. He concludes that "relative safety probably lies in the major use to which a car is put and in individual driving habits . . . If a crash does occur, the occupants are better off in a big car, particularly if it has collided with a small one, but the chances for staying out of an accident are better in a small car."

Dr. Malfetti, director of Columbia's Safety Education Project, added: "The composite safety difference (between big and little cars) may be so small that driving competence alone is the overriding factor."

However, Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory, Buffalo, N.Y., after a study of nearly 13,000 injury-producing car crashes, states that there is no reason to believe that small cars avoid accidents easier than large ones. There is insufficient evidence, says Cornell, to show that either big or little cars have a higher accident rate.

But the Cornell study does indicate that fatal injuries are about 50 per cent higher in little cars involved in serious accidents. And fatalities occur 30 per cent more often in medium-sized cars compared to big cars.

One possible reason may lie in the higher ejection rate of small cars—60 per cent more frequent. And risk of injury, say the experts, is twice as great if one is flying through the air rather than riding out a crash in the disintegrating vehicle.

Dr. B. J. Campbell head of the Cornell Laboratory Accident Crash Program, is quick to point out that any disadvantages of smaller cars "can be offset by applying existing techniques of auto safety."

This means seat belts, chest harnesses, door safety latches, padded dash boards, dished steering wheels and the rest of the small items of highway existence which have been proved effective in saving life and limb.

Most American and foreign companies now are either supplying seat belts as standard equipment or building in the anchors for them at the assembly line.

For reasons known only to auto makers, very few cars are equipped with seat belt-chest harness combinations. This rig, standard on the Swedish Volvo, for example, has been shown far superior to the seat belt alone in times of abrupt stops or crashes.

Still no strides have been made in the United States in investigating the merits of yellow headlights for all cars. They have been proven less glaring to oncoming drivers. Renault alone is studying the safety factors of yellow lights, which are used in France.

A suggestion by a safety expert that green rear lights be considered as a means of making some order out of the chaos of night driving apparently has been ignored by the industry.

Although some authorities, such as the National Safety Council, are quick to blame excessive speed for a large proportion of accidents, other voices have called for a re-appraisal of existing speed limits. Perhaps speed limits should be increased in some areas, they argue, to cut down on accidents.

The big car-small car controversy is not likely to find quick resolution. The job of staying alive on the nation's roads is a complicated one.

Make Coffee Cups Sparkle

Polly

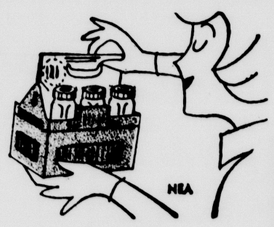
DEAR POLLY—Some of my coffee cups are not stain-resistant. Coffee breaks added up to a lot of scrubbing until started to use the stained cups to measure bleach on wash day, a different cup each time. Now my cups sparkle and I do not need anything extra to measure the bleach.—ANNE

DEAR POLLY—I have a tip straight from my washer repair man for those of you whose automatic washers empty directly into the laundry tubs. Fasten an old nylon stocking securely to the end of the water exhaust hose. You will be amazed at the amount of lint the stocking will trap that otherwise would have gone into, and eventually stopped up, the tub drain.

Refilling a salt shaker that must be inverted and filled at the bottom can be messy. Before tipping the shaker to remove the plug, fit a small pieces of pliable plastic wrap tightly over the TOP and secure it with a rubber band. You will find it fits so closely that only a few grain of salt escape and they stay in the wrap instead of spilling on the table or floor.

My pre-school daughter and I give any magazines about to be discarded a thorough check. With our respective scissors, she cuts out such things as color pictures of room settings and large objects with simple outlines and I clip the more complicated pictures that appeal to her. These cutouts are filed away in an old manila folder. When a rainy day rolls around, she gets them out and can play "store" with the food and household articles, "doll house" with the room settings and anything else her fertile imagination decrees. —JAN

DEAR POLLY—My baby's formula bottles were always falling over in the refrigerator until I started putting them in an empty soft drink carton which holds them upright.—NANCY



DEAR POLLY—I have a good quick way to cover a wire coat hanger so there is no danger of rust getting on clothes. Take a piece of soft plastic wrap that will stick to itself and tear off a piece a bit larger than the coat hanger. Lay the hanger on it and fold the two top corners over the hangers and cover completely. It stays on and lasts indefinitely.—HAZEL

Pumps In Six Million American Homes Obsolete

Better than half the pumps that power water supplies from private wells in this country need replacing, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

The Bureau points out that this does not mean the pumps mentioned are worn out — at least, not in all cases. Rather, it's a reflection of the tremendous increase in water usage by the average family — usage that has outgrown the ability of older pumps to maintain capacity and pressure.

What's behind this "spurt" in water use? For one thing, families are bigger. But more than that is the increased number of water-using appliances and devices being installed today. Automatic washing machines, dishwashers, food waste disposers, extra baths and showers, swimming pools — these are just a few of the many new demands on the family water supply.

The increased demand upon the average private well has accounted for a "water-strangulation" situation in millions of suburban and rural homes. Pumps and water systems that once were adequate can no longer keep up with family demands.

The only real answer to the problem, says the Bureau, is a new water system, designed with sufficient capacity and pressure to handle peak loads and maximum requirements.

While there is an initial investment involved, the savings in operating costs of a properly-sized pump are considerable. It runs for shorter periods, cuts down on wear, and still provides continuous full water pressure for all requirements.

Milk-An Adequate Supply

About half of all the milk deliveries in the nation last year -- 53.8 billion pounds -- was sold under the Federal milk marketing order program, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

What does this mean to consumers? Perhaps most important, the milk marketing order program means an adequate supply of fresh, wholesome milk. In other words -- the milk you want when you want it -- and at a relatively stable price.

Milk, like most foods, has a "season", a time when it is more noticeably plentiful. And there was a time when the price and supply varied with milk's season.

Under the milk marketing orders, administered by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, more orderly marketing is assured. Based essentially on supply and demand in a certain area, these orders establish a minimum price that dealers must pay for milk from dairy farmers.

Consumers, incidentally, have a say in this, too. Consumers are represented, as well as farmers and dealers, at public hearings held both before such an area is established and occasionally afterward to consider modifications.

There are 77 such milk marketing orders in operation, 34 in the Midwest. They cover milk sold by about 172,000 dairy farmers to dealers who supplied about 2/3 of the total non-farm population of the U. S. last year.

LBJ Aim: Spur Economic Freedom in Red Satellites

BY RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) President Johnson has two aims in "exploring ways to increase peaceful trade" with Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union as announced in his State of the Union message.

FIRST AIM—TO GIVE Eastern European countries more options in deciding what to do domestically and internationally.

State Department advisers say commercial expansion with the West will enable Eastern European nations to develop themselves economically along lines not approved by the Soviet Union. These men argue that the more economically independent these lands become, the more they will be able to decide things in their own national interest rather than be forced to act solely in the interests of Soviet Russia.

As one U.S. official put it, "They can't act independently if the Russians, by pushing a button, can cut off their livelihood."

NEITHER WHITE HOUSE nor State Department advisers expect trade expansion will turn Eastern European satellites away from communism.

But there is some hope here that (as in the case of Red China and the Soviet Union) the Communist countries will not always see alike on all issues. It will be helpful, officials say, if in such cases the Eastern European countries know they can vote their own interests without fear they'll be strangled by Moscow.

The U.S. trade drive will be aimed principally at Romania, Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria. East Germany will be excluded. American officials see no advantage in building relations with the East Germans.

Of late, the Eastern European countries have been feuding with the Russians over their domestic economic development. Moscow had a master plan whereby the satellites would produce for the Soviet bloc. They would not be allowed independent industrial-economic development. Instead, they would turn out the things the Red bloc needed, buy from and sell to Russia or each other in the quantities and at the prices the Russians decided.

This program kept Eastern European living standards low. It angered Eastern European leaders, including many native Communists, who wanted to develop their own countries in their own way. Some satellites began to build up domestic industry along national lines and to seek foreign trade with the West to bolster that industry.

SECOND AIM—TO BROADEN the economic thinking in both Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, to encourage their current slow, timid steps toward interest, profits, competition and other capitalistic ideas.

The Johnson program is a gamble, of course. In encouraging commerce and economic deals in which U. S. companies sell their know-how (with Export-Import Bank credits) to Red nations, the United States is taking the calculated risk of strengthening the economies of the Red regimes.

This gamble is somewhat the same as the gamble the United States has taken over many years in helping Yugoslavia. There is disagreement whether that U.S. aid has been profitable or unprofitable to U.S. interests. 1-7-65

Much Accomplished Between Inauguration Ceremonies

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the long view, what was accomplished between President John F. Kennedy's inauguration four years ago and President Johnson's Wednesday may not seem much. But there was progress.

Kennedy had no illusions when he took office Jan. 20, 1961, about what could be done, for he said: The problems facing the nation might not be solved "in our lifetime." Johnson hasn't set a timetable, either.

That he intends to push is clear. He has already hit Congress with major programs before it is back at work a month. He has promised to go overseas as part of his search for solutions, as Kennedy did.

But Kennedy apparently got more done, sitting in the White House, than by his travels. It was there he arranged the limited nuclear test-ban treaty and made the showdown decision on the Cuban missile crisis.

Johnson, remembering that and some of the emptiness of President Dwight D. Eisenhower's trips, can have no illusions about the magic of summit meetings.

In any four-year period a thousand events mushroom into headlines. When time blows the clouds away just a few can be discerned as major achievements. Two were outstanding in foreign affairs: The limited test-ban treaty and the missile crisis. But there were ominous events, too.

The treaty, signed by the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union, made the world healthier to live in. But neither France nor Red China, both on the road to nuclear power, signed.

Since China had its first atomic explosion last year, the speed of its progress in this field is menacing by itself, even though for some years it may not have deliverable weapons.

When Kennedy forced Premier Khrushchev to take his missiles out of Cuba, he left no doubt, if the Russians had any, this country would go to war if necessary. Then American-Soviet relations improved, tensions eased.

On the debit side the American-backed war in Viet Nam against communism was dwindling in chaos. This had its own somber implications. A Communist victory may end with Red China running all Southeast Asia in time.

The NATO alliance was getting rickety when Kennedy took over. This hasn't improved. The United Nations got itself into the ludicrous position of arguing over its members' obligations, particularly the Soviet Union's, to pay their dues.

There were two major achievements at home from the joint effort of two presidents and Congress.

Kennedy had sought approval of four programs above all: An $11.5-billion tax cut, biggest in history; a civil rights bill, strongest in this century; federal aid to education; medical care for the aged through Social Security.

He got none of them through Congress but his successor, Johnson, pushed hard and got the first two. This year Congress had hardly returned before he told them he wants the other two. And he may get them.

No less significant in these past four years, although less tangible, was the voters' rejection of Sen. Barry Goldwater's particular brand of conservatism and their approval of the much more moderate Johnson.

Since this was the first time in at least a generation the voters had such a clear-cut choice between those two schools of thought and government, the direction in this country seems clear for years:

A continuation of the Kennedy-Johnson kind of foreign policy and the increasing role of the government in American life, particularly in taking a greater responsibility for the general welfare, with all that means.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Summers and baby of St. Louis were weekend guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Summers and Jeanie and his grandmother, Mrs. Ora Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Naney were business visitors in Dexter Saturday.

Mrs. Darrel Shock and son and Mrs. Gene Barnes and Barbara Kay visited Mr. and Mrs. Gene Adams and family of Bloomington, Ill. last week end. Mrs. Adams was a surgical patient in a hospital there recently.

The nominating committee of the Canalou Alumini met Sunday afternoon in the elementry school building. Those on the committee are Mrs. G. D. Drake, Mrs. Chas. Bowman, Mrs. Web Sibley, Mrs. Erlin Wrather, John Summers, and Bill Westefield.

Rickey Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Jones was dismissed from the Sikeston hospital Tuesday. He has been ill for several days. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Bert McWaters.

Mrs. Jack Long and children and Mrs. Hosea Long of Vanduser were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Long and children.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Starkey and Carolyn of near Circle City were Sunday guests of her mother, Mrs. Charlie Weatherford and other relatives.

Mrs. N. G. Hewitt and Ronnie shopped in Cape and visited their daughter and sister, Mrs. Gaines Eaves and family Thursday of last week.

God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it. ——Daniel Webster

J. Edgar Hoover says: "The greed for sudden wealth or 'easy money' is a common human frailty. It is a weakness closely allied with moral decadence."

Kerchief Hats Are Hits

Period Design Not Enhanced By Old-Fashioned Radiators

Professional decorators tell us that a piece or two of Victorian or other period furnishings may be blended successfully with a contemporary theme.

Maybe so, but the advice sure doesn't apply to old-fashioned radiators that date back to guest parlor days. These antique heating units are an eyesore in any setting and should be replaced as one of the first steps in redecorating a home.

The Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau recommends convectors as a highly satisfactory replacement for old-time radiators. The changeover can be made by a qualified heating contractor with a minimum of inconvenience to the homeowner, since convectors are installed with the same piping connections used by the radiators.

Here's how a convector works. Supplied with hot boiler water, it draws air in a bottom opening, heats it and sends it out a top opening. Operating in this manner, convectors blanket outside walls and windows with warm air, shutting out cold and blocking drafts.

It has a definite advantage over other heating methods, since half of the heat provided is convected, half radiant -- radiant being the sunshine-like variety that emits warm rays. Heating engineers consider such a convection - radiation balance ideal.

ABOUT OUR SCHOOLS
by LYNN TWITTY

In an attempt to keep the content of courses and method of instruction as nearly current as possible and to thereby better meet the needs of our students, we try, when applicable, to make revisions in all areas of teaching. The Business Education Department is being reorganized with the aim of making the department more vocational in nature than it presently is. Beginning next year we expect to enroll students choosing business education in two hours blocks of time rather than the one hour class presently being offered and they may choose the following areas, each of which will be taught on a two hour basis: Secretarial Training; Office Training; Bookkeeping; Clerical and Accounting and Business Management and Sales for Small Businesses. Within these two hour blocks of time they will receive the necessary instruction in typing, shorthand, busines machines, bookkeeping etc., designed for the particular occupational aim which each student has. We think the course in Business Management and Sales for Small Businesses especially important as the proprietorship, ownership or management of small businesses is still one of our greatest occupational fields. In fact there are four and one half million businesses in the United States at the present time and the turnover, and consequently occupational opportunity, is high because of retirement, change of management into another or larger business, etc.

We hope to keep our content and teaching methods as nearly parallel to business needs as possible and expect to work with all local businessmen who will cooperate with us in making our teaching effective.

If arrangements can be made, some of our students will be placed for "on the job training" in cooperating businesses while still enrolled in school. This would be on a part time basis and the cooperating businessmen could provide instruction and experience to the student which would be impossible for us to provide in a classroom situation. On the other hand, we could teach those basic skills which the business employee must have in order to perform his job effectively.

Early in this century a remarkable Italian lady, Dr. Maria Montessori, founded a method of teaching which had a very considerable impact on education in a number of nations and especially in the United States. Her methods, with some revision, are again appearing in a number of schools in the United States and more especially in private schools where parents of the students think it particularly valuable.

Many of the ideas developed by Dr. Montessori have become a part of the instruction used by most teachers and are generally well known. The teaching pays attention to the child rather than vice versa. The child proceeds at his own rate in an environment controlled to provide the means of learning. The heart of the process is the use of imaginative teaching materials. Each of these is self-correcting thus allowing the child to proceed at his own rate and to find his own mistakes. Programmed learning in use in many of our schools, as it is to some extent here in Sikeston, is an outgrowth of this idea. The involvement of the child's muscles and all senses in the learning process is used. The child feels, sees, tastes, hears in order to make his learning more meaningful, lasting and effective.

The inside of the true Montessori classroom sometimes looks pretty much like "controlled chaos" with each child working at the particular learning activity he has chosen. It is best adapted to very small class size and for that reason is somewhat difficult to use in the public school. However, the imaginative teacher will always use some of the methods developed by Dr. Montessori to make the learning process as exciting and meaningful as possible. Every teacher should be familiar with the theories and methods of all types of education. Parents as well can do more for their children if they have some familarity with the various learning processes.

We can pretty nearly solve the drop out problem when we make school as exciting, interesting and as much fun as it is to stay out of school.

---

We visited a large metropolitan school system a few days ago where most of the school buses were operated by women drivers. Apparently these lady drivers were doing an excellent job. Their supervisor said that they were capable, kept good schedules and apparently had no more disciplinary or control problems than did the men drivers. His comment was that student control depended almost entirely on the driver, and we would add to this that the same thing is true in the classroom. Competent teachers, like competent drivers, have little trouble with discipline.

The supervisor of the system we are referring to said that, as might be expected, the women drivers usually kept their buses cleaner than did the men.

We have, in my opinion, a highly competent corps of school bus drivers here in Sikeston. They do a good job in getting our children to and from school and their safety record is almost perfect. We think they would be difficult to beat but we suspect that we have competent women in the community who could also do a good job driving our buses if the occasion ever arose.

President Lyndon Johnson recently made this statement: "I haven't encountered many problems that couldn't be solved by education."

You Can Speak Spanish In 24 Hours

Quiere usted hablar Espanol? If you have wanted to speak Spanish, but have always shied away from the tedious hours of study required, then Spanish SPEED SPEECH, which was developed by William Archer, is for you. This amazingly fast, new technique can put anyone on the road to Spanish proficiency in only 24 hours of concentrated study. You will be pleased to know that there are no complicated verb conjugations or lengthy vocabulary to memorize. You start learning to speak Spanish immediately!

William Archer, the creator of SPEED SPEECH, has heard the phrase "ugly American" many times, while traveling abroad. Mr. Archer has talked personally with the peoples of many countries, and he has heard the words -- indifferent, impolite, hostile, offensive -- used much too often in describing the American people. The most basic step in understanding the people of any country is to understand their language. Learn to speak Spanish this amazing new way -- it takes only 24 hours.

Spanish SPEED SPEECH is available only through The Daily Sikeston Standard. Since it is being offered as a public service to our readers, we are able to give you the textbook at considerable savings by following these simple instructions: 1. Send the easy order blank, which will appear in The Daily Sikeston Standard several times each week. This entitles you to a total savings of $2.00 on the textbook. 2. Mail the order blank and a check or money order for $3.04, payable to The Daily Sikeston Standard.

Lightest Mexico

By John Abney

Merida, Mexico -- Jetted in here today on a Mexican Aviation Company (CMA) Comet to see how the Texans of Mexico are making out. This being the comparison many Mexicans make with the people of Yucatan.

Yucatan considers itself a sort of republic like they do in Texas," the travel gentleman in Mexico City said.

The reason for this notion is that Yucatan is surrounded by the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean on three sides. The fourth frontier is heavy jungles and no roads.

A few years ago the only way you could get here was by pint sized steamers from Veracruz, that wallowed across the Gulf to Campeche or Progreso. CMA hooked Merida up by air and the government pushed through a good highway and railroads.

The CMA Comet makes it from Mexico City in 90 minutes for $44 US.

Merida hasn't changed much in the past few centuries. It is clean, colonial and different from the rest of Mexico. Plush hotels now dot the city but living has held its same easy pace.

The Hotel Merida has 110 air conditioned rooms and suites. The newest and most elegant here. A classy swimming pool where the clients lounge in the sun to contemplate the historical past in the midst of modern culture.

They serve it with onion rings in tacos, heaped on platters or in tortas -- sandwiches made of hard rolls.

Another favorite dish -- mine, too -- is jokingly called "papas azules." I think the real name is papat dzul. This consists of chicken tacos with a blue-green sauce made of ground pumpkin seeds.

Much of the food dates back to the Maya days and you don't find it in other parts of the country unless a Yucateco sets up his own restaurant somewhere else.

The cool plazas here are still shaded by thick, Indian laurel trees and ringed by benches and shoe shine artists.

And the chief industry around here is henequen, a sisal-fiber that comes from a spiked cactus plant. They use it for making ropes, baskets and hats. Panama hats, incidentally, are made here in large quantities.

Merida is the center of operations for visits to the ruins of the great Maya empire at Chichen Itza, Kabah and the more recently discovered set at Dzibil Chaltun.

Apparently the Maya Indians specialized in devising names like these as well as building fabulous cities. They had a high rolling civilization more than a thousand years ago when a lot of Europeans were still running around in wolf hide underwear.

Another curious feature of this interesting world is the lay of the land. It is flat, flat, flat and a bump three feet high is considered a mountain.

Also, I have never seen a surface river in Yucatan. They are all underground due to something about the geological age or some such. Seems rather complicated but they pump streams and Merida is happy with this arrangement.

Everything is pleasant and colonial and the trade winds keep the evening cool. Moderately priced, too. Even though the tourists have discovered Merida and come flocking in from all points these days.

FINDING THE WAY

Wisdom of Faith

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

There is a famous prayer that can be uplifted each day:

"Lord, give me the serenity to accept what cannot be changed,
Give me the courage to change what ought to be changed,
And the wisdom to know the difference."

Attributed to the eminent theologian, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, this prayer opens life to those twins of serenity and courage that merge into wisdom.

Any one of us has an inventory of personal or social problems to demand both this serenity and the courage. At the risk of oversimplification but in the hope of "priming the pump," here are a few:

"Lord, give me the serenity to accept": The difficult fact of myself. That's a demanding discipline. Too many persons live through their lives without ever really determining actually making their faith articulate. The guilt-ridden can't forgive themselves; and the cynical won't even confront themselves.

"Lord give me the serenity to accept": Today. Many persons who are unwilling to be seen in last year's clothing continue to wear last century's values. Only those who have the serenity to accept the fact that they live in the "Now" can claim the grace to live serenely in the most demanding of circumstances.

"Lord give me the grace to accept": God. In a time of scientific acceleration and knowledge-explosion, our ideas of God may have been too small BUT He is greater than our ideas. To accept God is to understand that a man can know the power of God which creates the godly.

"Give me the courage to change": Apathy. That sin which permits men to get accustomed to ugliness, to corruption, or to a divided humanity is the yawn of the cynic. In every town there is a need to pray for the courage to rout apathy.

"Give me the courage to change": Hopelessness. In an age of many things there is also the loss of pride in craftsmanship. Too many are willing to settle for getting by instead of knowing the inner drive which demands the yearning for excellence. When great reverences are treated casually, there is an air of hopelessness which settles on the human race.

"Give me the courage to change": Fear. It's a strange fear that immobilizes so many. John Ciardi once said: "We are so afraid of going broke that we're afraid to go for broke."

"And the wisdom to know the difference": That's the faith and trust that enables a man to know that nothing can separate him from the love of God. Either we are tools of the Almighty or we are pawns of the dreadful. Today we pray for this God-given serenity, courage and wisdom.

THE Outlook for Business

MERCHANDISING
Austin T. Cushman Chairman of the Board
Sears, Roebuck and Co.

This panel has been asked to appraise prospective business conditions through mid-1965. I am glad our assignment stops at midyear, for obviously the further ahead one has to project, the greater the potential risk of error becomes. This is particularly true this year now that we have behind us 45 months of recovery from the low point of the previous business downturn in early 1961.

As I look into the first half of 1965, I see on balance continued good retail sales. In the first two months we will still be getting the benefit of the tax cut which was effective March 1, 1964. We will, of course, miss the extra business day which Leap Year provided in 1964. In April, there may be a little hesitation. The current withholding tax rates for many families are not sufficient to meet full income tax obligations and some thousands of households will find it necessary to "ante up" an additional amount to square their accounts. But this will be only temporary.

By far, however, the most important consideration is the fact that more people are at work than ever before, the majority with high and rising incomes. We seem to have a national obsession to talk about unemployment and sometimes look at this side of the coin so closely that we fail to turn it over and look at the other side. I do not mean to belittle the unemployment problem nor underestimate the personal suffering involved for those unemployed who really need and want to work. The latest figures indicate that 3,373,000 persons, equal to 5.0 per cent of the labor force were unemployed in mid-November. A little comfort can be taken from the fact that this total numbers nearly 600,000 fewer than last year.

But let us look at the positive side. There are now 70,793,000 persons gainfully employed; nearly 1,500,000 more than a year ago. There has been fuller employment this year for those at work, a longer workweek, and more overtime. Meanwhile, wages and salaries for a wide variety of jobs, both white collar and blue collar, continue their year-to-year advance to higher levels. Latest figures on total wage and salary income show it to be running at a $337 billion annual rate, an increase of $19 billion over 1963.

I conclude that we retailers have another good season ahead of us. We may have to work a little harder to be heroes in 1965 than was necessary in 1964. This will be particularly true for that bottom line on the profit and loss statement. But unless a deteriorating foreign situation drastically alters consumer psychology, the retailers of the nation should be able to add another four or five per cent increase in spring 1965 to the healthy gains already secured in 1964.

Why is it that we rejoice at a birth and grieve at a funeral? It is because we are not the person involved. -- Mark Twain.

How America Had a Ball

BUCHANAN
History's most lavish.

JOHNSON
"Jest plain folks."

HARDING
"Cruel and unusual use."

By JERRY KLEIN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) The ghosts of George Washington wearing black velvet and diamonds, Woodrow Wilson forbidding an inaugural ball as "frivolous" and William Henry Harrison killing himself delivering an 8,000-word-long Inaugural Address, all will be among the invisible audience at the Capitol Jan. 20.

As Lyndon Johnson is sworn in as their successor to the nation's highest office they may reflect how dramatically inaugurals have changed.

Washington may admire LBJ for deciding to break custom and wear a plain business suit for the ceremony. The father of his country never felt comfortable in the fancy dress and varnished shoes his advisers felt dignity required, but apparently Washington tried to make up for this flamboyance by giving the shortest inaugural address, just 134 words.

On Wednesday evening some 20,000 persons are expected to attend a series of inaugural balls, a tradition begun by James Madison in 1809 (when only 400 turned up). His predecessor, Jefferson, had disapproved of a ball because it "smacked of royalty."

Similar celebrations were ruled out by Franklin Roosevelt, Hoover, Coolidge, Harding and Wilson, perhaps sensing America's coming involvement in war, said such a ball would be "somewhat frivolous in the face of the solemn responsibility assumed in taking office as president."

President Johnson's inaugural speech will probably follow his "jest-plain-folks" style and be of moderate length. It took about an hour for Harrison to get off the 8,578-worder prepared for him by Daniel Webster—enough time for him to get chilled and die of pneumonia within the month.

Inaugural addresses have varied in quality as well as quantity, of course. The one Abraham Lincoln delivered at his second swearing-in ("with malice toward none") has become a classic of spoken literature, though it was one of the shortest: just 588 words. John Kennedy's, too, will probably bulk important in history.

But Harding's speech was so full of "incomprehensible polysyllables" that literary critic H. L. Mencken said it possessed the "style of a rhinoceros liberating himself by main strength from a lake of boiling molasses." Harding had "tortured" the American language, charged Mencken, and put it "to cruel and unusual uses."

Inaugural speeches have been used to set the tone and thrust of the new administration. But strangely, there were four chief executives who delivered no addresses at all. Presidents Tyler, Fillmore Johnson and Arthur were vice presidents who succeeded to the higher office through death. But since none was elected in his own right, none ever got the chance to make an inaugural speech.

It will be some time before the total bill for the 1965 inauguration comes in, but no doubt it will run into the hundreds of thousands. Just to erect reviewing stands around the White House cost about $100,000 these days. Though when Zachary Taylor was sworn in they cost $200 and the carpenters were glad to be earning $1.50 a day.

This inaugural crowd will no doubt be well behaved. Yet the White House reception given for Lincoln was so disorderly it seemed that "a regiment of troops had been quartered there with permission to forage."

The public was so unruly following Jackson's swearing-in that they left the White House virtually in tatters. Afterward, Jackson and his vice president, John Calhoun, had trouble finding enough unbroken china on which to have dinner.

At Ulysses S. Grant's inaugural reception, jewels were stolen from ladies' gowns and the guests' clothing was mixed up that next morning so some 800 "frantic" people were still milling around trying to locate their hats and coats.

One of the most lavish banquets ever to follow a presidential inauguration was laid for James Buchanan. A special building was erected for the party, 235 feet long, decorated in red, white and blue.

Inside was served a banquet including 400 gallons of oysters, 500 quarts of chicken salad, 1,200 quarts of ice cream, 500 quarts of jelly, 60 saddles of mutton, four saddles of venison, 75 hams and 125 tongues.

The event, it is said, was long remembered.

Joynt Reapportionment Committee Chairman; Other Committee Appointments

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Sen. John W. Joynt, D-St. Louis, has announced Sen. Omer H. Avery, D-Troy, will head the important Reapportionment Committee.

He said the 13-member committee will handle all congressional and legislative redistricting bills. They are expected to pose some of the season's toughest problems.

Bills and a constitutional amendment to carry out Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' plan for bipartisan legislative redistricting commissions already have been introduced in the Senate.

Joynt, president pro tem, named himself to head the powerful Senate Judiciary Committee. It handles more bills than any other and sometimes acts as a "graveyard" committee to bury unwanted measures.

Sen. Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, former chairman, will be a member of the Judiciary Committee this time.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, will again be appropriations chairman - his third hitch in that job.

Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, will head the Economics Committee which screens all bills involving major expenditures.

Both the Judiciary and Economics committees were heavily weighted in favor of the slim Senate majority which elected Joynt president pro tem over Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, who was the governor's choice for the job.

Here are the chairmen — many of them repeaters — of other major committees among the 31 appointed (all aare Democrats:

Agriculure — Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham of Columbia; Banks-Sen. Jack C. Jones of Carrollton; Conservation and parks-Sen. Blackwell; Correctional Institutions — Sen. John E. Downs of St. Joseph;

Employment Security — Sen. T. D. McNeal of St. Louis;

Industrial, Nuclear, Aviation, Space and Water Resources-Sen. John J. Johnson of St. Louis County; Insurance—Sen. Edgar J. Keating of Kansas City;

Labor—Sen. Robert A. Young of St. Louis County; local government-Sen. Maurice Schechter of Creve Coeur; Mental Health—Sen. John P. Barrett of St. Louis;

Metropolitan-Sen. Jasper M. Brancato of Kansas City; Municipal Corporations - Brancato; Public Health and Welfare—Sen. William J. Cason of Clinton;

Roads and highways — Sen. Michael Kinney of St. Louis; Salaries-Kinney; State Departments — Sen. Raymond Hopfinger of St. Louis County; Ways and means — Avery; Workmen's Compensation — Sen. Robert Pentland of St. Louis.

Language Change May Mean End of The Paulist Choir

CHICAGO (AP) — The switch in lyrics of Roman Catholic hymns from Latin to English apparently is sounding the end of the famed Paulist Choir.

Worshippers now sing at intervals during the Mass — a function that had been performed by priests and trained vocalists.

The Rev. Eugene F. O'Malley, 63, said Tuesday in an interview he will retire after 37 years as director of the choir, a group of men and boys.

"The liturgical reform movement, with congregational singing and English instead of Latin, seems to have made us unnecessary," Father O'Malley said.

"I doubt that the choir will continue. It's the end of an era."

Since its founding in 1904 at St. Mary's church — the city's oldest Roman Catholic congregation — the 85-voice choir has sung in most major cities of the United States, Canada and Europe.

Audiences have included Pope Pius X, Pope Pius XII, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and the late President John F. Kennedy.

The main purpose of the choir, however, has been to sing the Latin hymns and responses during Mass at St. Mary's.

Because of liturgical changes adopted by the Second Vatican Council, the last Mass to be sung in Latin at St. Mary's will be Feb. 28.

The choir, whose members range in age from 8 to 65, was founded by the Rev. William J. Finn shortly after the Paulist fathers took over St. Mary's.

Patterson Again Chairman, Appropriations Committee

Senator J. F. Patterson, representing the 25th Senatorial District in the Missouri Senate has again been named Chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the 73rd Session of the General Assembly. This will be the third session Senator Patterson has served in this capacity. In addition to this appointment, Senator Patterson was named by Senator John Joynt of St. Louis Second District, President Pro Tem to membership on nine other committees. They are as follows: Agriculture, Banks and Banking Economics and Major Expenditures, Insurance, Legislative Research, Roads and Highways, Rules and Joint Rules and Salaries and Resolutions.

Anticipating his reappointment as Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Senator Patterson assisted the then Governor Elect Warren Hearnes and the budget staff in the preparation of the budget during November and December of last year. The emergency or deficiency appropriation bill has already been introduced in the House where hearings are currently being held. This bill should reach the Senate the first week in February and Senator Patterson will then begin the Senate Committee Hearings. The regular appropriation bills have been introduced in the House and hearings will begin within the next three weeks by the House Appropriations Committee but they are not expected to reach the Senate before April 1st.

During the interim following the last session of the General Assembly Senator Patterson has served as a member of the State Reorganization Committee which report will be delivered to Governor Hearnes on January 25th. This committee reviewed the various departments assigned to the Executive Branch of the state government and is making recommendations to the governor and General Assembly on legislative matters to be considered in this session.

For the past several months Senator Patterson has been working as vice-president in charge of public relations for Mark Twain Life Insurance Company which home office is located in Jefferson City, Missouri. He serves the company from his home in Caruthersville and from the home office in Jefferson City. Persons desiring to contact Senator Patterson may reach him at his Senate office in Jefferson City, his home in Caruthersville or at the home office of Mark Twain Life Insurance office in Jefferson City.

Family Physician Has Key Role In Care of Mentally Retarded

The family physician today has the key role in the care and treatment of mental retardation -- a condition "fully as subtle and complicated as that of open heart surgery or organ transplants."

His responsibilities were spelled out in a report from the American Medical Association Conference on Mental Retardation appearing in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The report was compiled by Julius B. Richmond, M. D., of Syracuse, conference chairman; George E. Gardner, M.D., director of the Judge Baker Guidance Clinic, Boston, and George Tarjan, M. D., superintendent and medical director of the Pacific State Hospital, Pomona, Calif.

"In terms of magnitude," they said, "mental retardation is the most handicapping of all childhood disorders.

"Approximately five million individuals diagnosed at some time in their lives as retarded now live in the United States and some 126,000 more are born yearly. A much larger number probably function ineffectively throughout life, though never identified."

And yet, said the conference leaders, perhaps 50 per cent of the cases of mental retardation are preventable.

With major infections being conquered, with many metabolic and nutritional disorders brought under relatively effective control, "the physician is at last permitted the time and energy necessary to develop the sophistication he must have in order to grapple effectively on a clinical level with this disorder." The report itself is intended to serve as a handbook on mental retardation and will be widely distributed to physicians and medical schools.

It delineates the latest knowledge concerning prevention, diagnosis and treatment; lists facilities and services necessary to provide maximum help for the retarded child; offers suggestions for helping the retarded child's family meet their problems, and defines some of the research and education problems which must be solved in coming to grips with retardation.

The report also seeks to encourage new and more rewarding methods of care at the community level where, it is felt, best results can be anticipated. These methods, however, require new facilities, new planning and new organization so that comprehensive, as opposed to piecemeal, care can be provided.

It is not enough, the report pointed out, that physicians be well informed and well organized to cope with the problems of mental retardation. Communities, nationwide, must also be organized so that supporting services -- family counseling, psychological testing, special education, rehabilitation and vocational training -- are readily available for the retarded.

In other words, mental retardation is not only a medical problem, it is also an "educational and social problem of vast dimensions," the report said.

"The nation, however, also possesses a substantial reservoir of knowledge and skill in this demanding field," it continued. Could all of this knowledge be put into effective use immediately, it is estimated that as much as half of all retardation might be prevented and the lives of the remaining victims rendered more productive and fulfilled."

It has been apparent for some years, Dr. Richmond noted, that the problems of the mentally retarded have "not received adequate attention."

But interest in mental retardation is now on the upsurge, he added, stimulated by the interest of the late President John F. Kennedy, congressional appropriations for building and expanding facilities and the increased activities of voluntary organizations.

"Now, with medical progress having dealt relatively effectively with the acute disorders of childhood, the time is ripe for renewed efforts in this field," he said.

That primary physicians, rather than the specialists in mental disorders, should spearhead this effort is due to what the report termed the "particularly effective position" of the primary physician.

It is the doctor in private practice -- the general practitioner, the pediatrician, the internist -- who sees children in their first years of life.

Thus, the primary physician often has an opportunity to identify mental retardation in a child years before it might otherwise be recognized.

Early diagnosis, in turn, means early help for the retarded child when chances of reversing retardation are usually at their best.

This is particularly true in what is termed "socio-cultural retardation." In such cases, the report said, "Enrichment of the child's environment begun early enough may save the child from a lifetime handicap."

"Mental retardation now poses to the primary physician what is in essence, a more complicated medical problem than many he may have had time and resources to attack before."

But it is a problem with which the primary physician can cope by expanding his knowledge and modifying the skills and techniques he uses with all cases of chronic illness, the report added.

"The primary physician faces a new challenge in retardation, not because the problem is new but because for the first time he has the necessary time and resources with which to confront it."

Grapefruit-Orange Blended Juice

Tangerines in your blended orange-grapefruit juice? Yes, it's legal under the U.S. standards for grades of canned blended grapefruit juice and orange juice -- in limited amounts for the sake of color and flavor.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced early this month that the U.S. standards for canned, blended grapefruit and orange juice were to be amended to permit the addition of these other juices. This change in the standards became effective January 8, 1965.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, which is responsible for food grade standards, explains that the change makes the requirement for the orange juice portion of the product the same as specified for canned orange juice under standards of both USDA and the Food and Drug Administration.

Specifically the change in standards allows 10 per cent of the orange juice ingredient to consist of the juice of mandarin oranges, including tangerines. Addition of these juices in this limited amount, will help standardize the color and flavor of the grapefruit-orange blend.

In November, 1964 USDA also revised the U.S. standards for grades of canned and frozen concentrated orange juice, bringing these into line with Food and Drug Administration requirements.

matter of fact

The word martinet, a military term meaning a strict disciplinarian or taskmaster, was derived from Jean Martinet in the French army during the reign of Louis XIV. He was an inspector general of infantry and a stern drillmaster. He was accidentally shot by his own artillery while leading an infantry charge.

Armed Forces

USS TATTNALL (DDG-19) Jan. 12 -- Fireman Henry Hampton, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hampton of 15 W. Castor St., Dexter, Mo., participated Jan. 6-15 in an amphibious landing operation called MEDLANDEX 1-65 while serving aboard the guided destroyer USS Tattnall.

The exercise, which took place on the beaches of Porto Scudo and Cape Teulada, Sardinia, was conducted to give both Marine and fleet units training in conducting full scale amphibious operations.

During the live firing exercise, Marines landed from ships and helicopters. In the helicopter landing phase, called vertical envelopment, Marines are flown over and behind enemy lines to cut off enemy supplies and reinforcements.

Training operations of this type are conducted periodically by units of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean to insure the combat readiness of all elements of the Navy - Marine Corps team.

WALKIN' AND RIDIN':
By Royal White

I've been walkin'
On the sunbeams
I've been ridin'
On the wind
Floating down clear streams
Of water
Slept in cotton
When it's ginned
I have dipped my spoon
In lake[illegible] promise
I have b[illegible]d in pools
Of cha[illegible]
I have fought

The famous Lloyd's of London sells all types of insurance except long-term life and financial guarantee. It started in 1688 as a coffee house, where Edward Lloyd began to sell insurance policies against sea losses. At one time it carried an insurance of more than 600,000 pounds on a bullion shipment from Veracruz, Mexico.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON -- Britain's Prince Philip is six feet tall and his son, Prince Charles, 16, the heir apparent, is about five feet nine inches tall and coming up fast. The two were vacationing in Liechenstein.

Mark Twain Residence Hall At Columbia Offers Modern Conveniences and Luxury

A pool outside and air conditioned comfort within are features of the Mark Twain Residence Hall for Men and Women, Columbia. The 450-resident facility adjacent to the University of Missouri's "red" campus opened last September; and its 628-resident companion, Lewis and Clark Residence Center, is nearing completion. Both centers -- the only air conditioned residence halls at the University of Missouri -- are operated by University Dormitory Development, Inc. Together, they represent a total investment in excess of $6 million.

A special attraction to organizations and associations, graduate and undergraduate students, and professional persons taking summer refresher courses, are the extensive meeting and seminar facilities provided. "We fully expect that starting this summer the Mark Twain and Lewis and Clark will become focal points for meetings of groups from 20 to 300," said Jack Wilson, manager. "and we will be prepared to meet all their requirements including food of the highest quality."

Other features of the new residence centers include built-in furniture, wardrobe closets, individual room lavatories, private tiled baths between each two rooms, individual room telephones, maid service, carpeted hall floors, floor lounges with television, high speed elevators, large main floor lounges, cafeteria dining rooms, evening snack bars, study halls, recreation and billiard rooms, automatic laundries and ample off-street parking. Lewis Hall, the new tower building for graduate students, contains a high number of single rooms to meet advanced students' requirements for greater privacy.

The Mark Twain Residence Hall is located a 515 South Fifth Street in Columbia, two blocks west of Jesse Hall. Lewis and Clark Residence Center is at 406-10 Turner Avenue, two blocks to the south of the Mark Twain.

FINDING THE WAY

Vow to Open a Door

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The crooner was singing – "Just us in a room, without windows or doors." Frankly, that doesn't sound too inviting, suggesting a cell instead of a room. And there is the old limerick:

I wish that my room had a floor.
I don't mind it not having a door;
But this walking around
Without touching the ground
Is getting to be quite a bore!

But I would be concerned if there was no door!

The challenge of this new year is discovering those doors. And then opening them.

Mankind is haunted by the number of bolted doors, areas where hope is abandoned. Think of the problems caused by totalitarian governments, or housing or racial injustice or extreme poverty and you are aware of the numbers of people who can't see a door.

What is worse there are the others who know there are doors and refuse to open them. They can tell you all of the hazards, the disappointments and the risks.

To be doorless in such a room is to be a victim of the heresy of despair. The doorless are hopeless.

To pretend that there are doors that open to easy ways by which these problems can be solved is to live in a fantasy-land.

To refuse to open the doors that are there is to be a defeatist and a cynic.

Men who collect such information, tell us that doors have many meanings. There is the old tradition in certain rural areas of painting the door blue when there were marriageable daughters at home. There are the churches with red doors. There were the doors to the castles with their great hinges of metal and their formidable look of authority. There are the glass doors that sometimes pose threats because they are confused with windows. The important fact to know is that there are doors. Personally, the most important significance of the door is "the open door."

There is a sentence at the opening of a newly published book of essays by the late Pierre Teilhard de Chardin. That distinguished scholar and priest wrote, "The whole future of the earth, as of religion, seems to me to depend on the awakening of our faith in the future." That's an open door.

Think of the differences in persons and communities when there are those who understand the meaning of the Lord who says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. To any man who opens, I will come in and sup with him." At the opening of the year, open the door!

Heating Expanded Areas Easy With Hydronic System

Family expansion often calls for home expansion. Frequently space can be provided with an addition on the house, finishing the attic, remodeling the basement or enclosing a sun porch or breezeway.

With a hydronic (hot water) heating system, there is no problem in providing this important element of expansion. Transmitting hot water through small diameter pipe or tubing, hydronic heating is so flexible that additional heat distributors can be installed wherever needed.

Most boilers have additional capacity to provide heat for extra rooms. If necessary, even more heat output can be obtained by insulating the piping, reports the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau.

With the system of circulated hot water, small pipe or tubing can be "threaded" through walls and floors to connect with baseboard heat distributors. Or, if the area is to have a slab floor, pipe coils can be imbedded to provide the comfort of radiant heat.

One of the first steps in planning home expansion is to get the advice of an experienced heating contractor. He will be glad to offer his suggestions and estimate costs for you.

Other letters to Malone Theatre manager McCutchen on the movie "Peter Pan" include: I wish to express my thanks to you for inviting us to the picture Peter Pan. It was very interesting and exciting to me. I am sure some of us could not have gone if it had not been for your generosity. I am sure everyone enjoyed it. Lillian Reiss.

In behalf of the boys and girls of the sixth grade, No. 2, I want to thank you for the theater party you gave us for Peter Pan. We thought the story beautiful and the acting splendid and all of us enjoyed it very much. We thought the comedy too was very funny and liked it. We wish you much prosperity in all your endeavors. ## PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

Thursday, January 21, 1965

"Go, therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." (Matthew 28:19, RSV)

PRAYER: Heavenly Father, help me to take seriously today the marching orders of our Lord. "Where hate rules, let me bring love; where malice, forgiveness; where dispute, reconciliation; where error, truth; where doubt, belief; where despair, hope; where darkness, Thy light; where sorrow, joy." In the Master's name. Amen.

Wives of New Congressmen Given Information on How to Get Along

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Wives of Democratic newcomers to Congress are being counseled on how to get along in Washington. The advice -- from the Democratic National Committee's women's division -- ranges from protocol to how to get a baby sitter.

Most of the wives said they considered getting baby sitters their most pressing problem. They were given a listing of university and commercial agencies where they can get help.

After the first of two briefing sessions for the wives of new senators and House members was held Friday, Mrs. Charles Farnsley, from Kentucky, laughingly reported the best advice she got was "I don't have to go to everything."

Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey, a veteran of the Capitol scene, came around to offer reassurance as a lunchtime speaker. But, the wife of the vice president-elect had to admit she shares the freshman wives' "unsureness" as she looks to the new job ahead of her.

It has "a different perspective, a different focus--things we've grown accustomed to and feel sure of are different. The whole scope is larger," she said.

Humphrey was a senator for 16 years.

Mrs. Humphrey said she hopes in six months "to feel as comfortable in the new job as you will.

She told the wives to begin right now to campaign for 1966. Campaigning in off-years is a must, she advised.

Mrs. Humphrey urged the wives to take part in Washington's social whirl "not only for yourself, but for your husband."

"Talk at Washington dinner parties and receptions is very educational," she added.

On clothes, Mrs. Margaret Price, national committee vice chairman, said: "Don't think you need a huge new wardrobe to meet Washington requirements.

"Many of the incumbent congressional wives tell us it is much easier to repeat dresses in Washington because from one gathering to another, one seldom sees the same group of people."

Check to See if Air Cadets Rode "Ponies" In Classroom

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) -- Air Force Academy officials said today a faculty committee is investigating reports of classroom cheating by some cadets at this newest of the nation's service academies.

A statement by the institution's information office said academy officials "have started a formal investigation on possible cheating activities by a group of cadets. The investigation is to determine whether or not examination materials from certain classes have been illegally obtained and used."

Maj. Gen. Robert H. Warren, academy superintendent, appointed the investigating committee but the names of its members were withheld. A spokesman said the committee's findings would be made public but that it would take "at least several days."

Academy officials turned aside all queries with a statement that "in order not to compromise the investigation, the academy will not release details until the investigation is complete."

There are 2,700 cadets enrolled at the Air Force Academy.

The statement said, "The academy operates under a cadet honor code. The alleged violations being investigated were brought to light during the operations of this honor system."

The investigation is the first at the academy since its inaugural class of cadets enrolled at temporary headquarters in Denver in July 1955. The cadets occupied their permanent home in the Rocky Mountain foothills 10 miles northwest of Colorado Springs in 1958.

Johnson's Inauguration Day a Melange Of Solemnity and Fractured Security; President Proves to be a "Man of Iron"

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's inauguration day turned out to be a remarkable melange of solemnity, folksiness and fractured security.

The security was broken by the President himself. The inaugural parade had hardly begun when the ebullient President jumped out of his bullet-proof limousine. In long strides he proceeded to the band of his alma mater, Southwest Texas State College, and shook the hands of four girl banner bearers.

The important part was, of course, the swearing in and the inaugural address. And the reaction to this speech, in which Johnson branded poverty and ignorance as national enemies, and said such evils as racial injustice and international hatreds must go, was generally favorable.

Many Republicans joined Democrats in applauding the goals, if not perhaps all the methods. Example: Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, who was deposed by colleagues as House Republican leader, called the speech "excellent." He added that of course there could be differences about specific programs.

The 56-year-old President, in his great happiness, proved to be an iron man physically. He wound up the long day with an arduous round of hall-hopping.

Accompanied by the First Lady in her jonquil yellow satin dress, he attended the inaugural ball, spread out over five great halls. Some 26,000 people had paid $25 a ticket for these king-sized "dances." The decor, symbolizing "America the Beautiful," featured shining seas, waves of amber grain and spacious skies.

The Johnsons' first stop on the ball circuit was at the Mayflower Hotel. The President led the First Lady to the dance floor, and danced with her briefly before changing partners nine times. Then he spotted Mrs. Clifton Daniel, daughter of former President Harry S Truman. He lifted her over the rail of her box and made several turns around the dance floor with her while several hundred guests applauded.

During the afternoon, the President had the time of his life watching the big inaugural parade pass his reviewing stand in front of the White House.

When he got to the White House, attendants brought the beagle "Him" and the white collie "Blanco" to him and the President lifted Him up into the leather easy chair reserved for the chief executive in the reviewing stand.

The dog stayed only briefly, perhaps because Lady Bird foresaw trouble. She is reported to have hinted strongly that Blanco is an outdoors dog, used to romping, and if he started romping in the reviewing stand things could get embarrassing.

When the Georgia float rolled by, the President kept pointing, calling Lady Bird's attention, as if to say, "Look, ma."

The float was a model of a Civil War railroad train, and represented the Lady Bird special which chugged through the South in the last campaign.

The President kept giving the high sign of friendship to all and sundry paraders, including Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, who has given the national Democratic administrations a peck of trouble.

The President was particularly joyous over the band from the Chicago Fire Department. These experts play music scored for sirens, bells and the hissing of fire extinguishers. They are led by a St. Bernard dog with a hat on.

Probably the most tired marchers Wednesday night were the "Barbarettes" of Santa Barbara, Calif. These ladies high-kicked their way all down Pennsylvania Avenue, in a striking display of comeliness.

Least tired? Probably the "highty-tighty" band of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. A march of a couple of miles is a breeze to them. They once got caught up in a five-mile parade in the Deep South, and by the end they had played "Dixie" 72 times.

Wonder of wonders, the parade attained its goal — to end before sundown, which was at 5:16 p.m. Actually the procession got past the President at 5:07.

The President then seized a microphone and said: "Thank you very much. You are wonderful people and you have made this such a lovely day, and we will try so hard to be worthy of your trust and friendship."

Gibson In Talk To Lions

Representing the Junior Woman's Club, Mrs. Shirley Dyer and Mrs. Sarah Sadler, were present, and Mrs. Dyer outlined the plans for the Follies to be staged by their organization.

Mr. Gibson outlined his address through a chart, showing how present national legislation would effect business, industry and other forms of national economy. He compared his topic with a live frog, when placed in a pan of hot water, will jump out, but when placed in a pan of cool water that is being heated will lose its sense of escape until it has been boiled.

"Your present Congress will have a liberal voting record in the two houses of the present 89th congress compared to the past congresses as follows: In the Senate the number is 59 compared to 56, while in the House it will be 267 compared 224. The coalition leadership of South and North members has been reduced from the 75 to 80 members, to the present 50."

"Just how it will affect you personally is the proposal of $2 minimum wage, a 35-hour work week, and double time for overtime. Other legislation being proposed is the federal regulation of unemployment compensation, a health and safety bill, extend the Davis-Bacon Act, and the Walsh-Healey Act. Included in the agenda will be the expansion of TVA concept of more public power; more control of the railroads, and an increase in public housing."

"New legislation also calls for the expansion of present agencies, some of whom are the public employment service, power commission, and the Area Redevelopment Act. Fiscal issues will be on the 1965 budget, the excise tax reform, social security medicare and unemployment compensation."

On the control issues will be a bill on consumer credit, packaging and labeling, and the omnibus bill. On the labor issues for this congress will be the minimum wage, 35-hour week, right to work law repeal, and the employment service extension. Interwoven with these bills will be the apportionment bill and the depressed areas bill."

"Your cost for the first year of legislation calls for an outlay, if passed by Congress, as follows; Medicare $1.6 billion; Accelerated Public Works. $1.5 billion; Urban Redevelopment $750 million; Appalachian Regional Development $228 million; Federal U. C., $188 million, and the Area Redevelopment Act $355 million."

The effect of the 35-hour week on business and industry would raise the present labor costs from 14.3 per cent to a high of 28.6 per cent. The question is just how much of this cost can be passed on to the consumer?"

"There is the defeatist attitude that can be taken by the people due to the lopsided majority in Congress, as well as the lack of business experience by many members of congress, as well as a number of Republicans who have deflected."

"In answer to any defeatist attitude are seven reasons that Congress may not be able to pass a great part of this program are as follows: President Johnson is for many of the things that business and industry is for. The President stated that the election was not a mandate of all the people and would not allow him to go on a spending spree. The extremism issue did not repudiate the conservative members of congress. The widespread support of business for the President. Many members of the committee are still headed by conservatives, and a similar period as today existed several times over in past administrations.

"My only appeal is that today every person should attend the political meetings, to see what is going on and how it will affect them."

Hornersville Man Dies Of Injuries In Auto Accident

There was only one traffic accident reported by Troop E, State Highway Patrol for Wednesday with neither fatality or injury involved

However at 2:45 a.m. Wednesday, the Patrol reports, Leonard Evans, 30, of Hornersville, died in the Dunklin County Memorial Hospital from injuries received in a traffic accident last Monday.

According to the Patrol, at 11:50 a.m. Monday, a mile south of Kennett on Highway 25, Mr. Evans' car ran into the rear of a Bread truck driven by Robert Marshall, 35, of Sikeston.

Early End to Dock Strike Up to Strikers

NEW YORK (AP) — A possible early end to the crippling Maine-to-Texas dock strike was in the hands of striking New York longshoremen today, as they voted a second time on a contract they rejected two weeks ago.

Thomas W. Gleason, president of the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association, says he has received enough petitions and telephone calls to assure acceptance of the proposed contract with the New York Shipping Association.

But even if his prediction proves correct, contract disputes in other ports could prolong the 11-day walkout that has idled 343 ships on the East Coast.

Some 60,000 men are idle and estimates of the cost to the national economy range from $20 million to $67 million a day.

However, an Associated Press survey indicated that the strike's full impact has not been felt in some areas.

Boston reported losing $500,000 weekly. Officials commented that many industries apparently were unaffected since they had not used up inventories of raw materials since the walkout began.

New York's loss is figured at $1.2 million a day.

The Gulf Coast walkout has more than quadrupled the import of bananas at Tampa, Fla., where dock workers are unaffected since they are under a separate contract. Most of the fruit was diverted from New Orleans.

Winston Losing Ground

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill has become weaker still, steadily losing ground to the effects of the stroke he suffered last Friday.

A new deterioration in the 90-year-old statesman's circulation was reported Wednesday night by his physician, Lord Moran, who said in the 13th bulletin he had issued on Churchill's condition:

"The weakness of Sir Winston's circulation is more marked. There is nothing else to report."

Interpreting the physician's announcement, a medical consultant said: "This indicates that what have been days of waiting may now be shortened to hours. The report of weakened circulation reveals that blood pressure is dropping and general bodily functions must soon fail."

Lord Moran went to Churchill's bedside three times Wednesday, including an unexpected call in the afternoon. Asked Wednesday night if Churchill's life was at a "low ebb," he replied, "Yes."

As newsmen waiting near Churchill's Hyde Park Gate home sought additional information on the former prime minister's condition, Moran added: "His condition is stationary. There is nothing more I can say."

The reference to Sir Winston's circulation was the first since the initial bulletin last Friday, which said he had had a cold, then developed a circulatory weakness following a cerebreal thrombosis.

Churchill has apparently been sleeping or in a coma most of the time since he was stricken. Moran's medical reports have indicated he has felt no pain.

Churchill had been reported restless Tuesday, but at midday Wednesday Moran said the patient had slept peacefully through the night and morning.

Churchill, too ill to be moved to a hospital, lay in his ground-floor back bedroom overlooking a garden behind the brick home at No. 28 Hyde Park Gate.

His family stayed close at hand in London, as they have done since the stroke.

A handful of newsmen kept watch at the entrance to the deadend street.

POTEAU, Okla. AP -- William Sanphard McMurray, who turned 100 years old Wednesday, said he gave up smoking two years ago.

"I quit cigarettes at age 98," he said, "It wasn't the cancer scare that got me. It was the hike in price to 30 cents a package."

Semo College Gets Grant For Special Math Program

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- Southeast Missouri State College has been awarded $18,780 by the National Science Foundation for the operation of a science and mathematics enrichment program for high school students this summer.

The six-week program, which will run from June 21 to July 30, will be for a maximum of 60 students who are about to enter their senior year in high school, who are recommended for their interest and ability in science or mathematics.

The program at SEMO State will be aimed at building up work that the students cannot get in their own high schools because of lack of facilities, and is also conceived as a stimulant to general interest in science and mathematics through the students as they return to their high schools for the final year of study.

Participants in the program will live on campus, and eat in college dining halls. The NSF grant covers instructions and fees for laboratory work, but students will be asked to pay their own room and board whenever possible, although financial help will be available where absolutely necessary.

The summer session will consist of four main study areas, from which students will elect one, and at least one supplementary class for all students.

The courses to be offered include Growth and Development (biology), taught by Dr. John Himni; Atomic and Molecular Chemistry, taught by Dr. E. L. Bahn; The Hydrologic Cycle (earth science), taught by Dr. C. E. Williams; and Modern Algebra, taught by Mr. Harold Hager.

In addition to the major courses, which will be daily lectures and laboratory work, a supplementary course in Probability and Statistics will be held three times a week.

Dr. Robert Kuster, director of the program, said that plans will be completed late this month, and that information will be sent to school officials throughout this area.

Propane Gas Line Explodes near the Osage-3 Injured

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) --A pipeline exploded east of Osage City today and as gas collected in low pockets two cars blew up, injuring three people.

Two were reported seriously burned and were taken to St. Mary's hospital in Jefferson City.

The gas was still burning fiercely at the point of the rupture more than an hour after the initial blast.

The highway patrol blocked off the area and ordered residents to turn out their pilot lights and drivers to turn off their heaters to prevent further blasts.

One farmer said a whole valley was ablaze for a few seconds. There was no wind as the temperature stood in the mid-twenties and the weather bureau did not expect any increase in wind to blow the collected gas away.

Scouts To Go To Church Scout Week

Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorers in the Southeast Missouri Council, Boy Scouts of America, will fulfill their obligations to be "faithful in their religious duties" by attending religious services in connection with Boy Scout Week which observes the 55th aniversary of the national boys' organization.

Scouts of Jewish faith will attend Sabbath services on Friday evening (Feb. 5), while other Scouts in uniform will attend their own churches with their parents on Sunday (Feb. 7).

Many churches plan to use the Boy Scout Week theme Strengthen America's Heritage and to recognize their leaders and Scouts as part of services or special programs, according to A. J. Drinkwater, Jr., chairman of the Scout council's camping activities committee.

While not a religious teaching movement, the Boy Scouts of America believes that no boy can grow to a successful manhood without a firm belief in God Drinkwater said.

Building to Take 3 Years

A huge shopping center fronting 1,165 feet on S. Kingshighway south from Murray Lane, and 1,000 feet on Murray Lane from Kingshighway to Scott street is in prospect for Sikeston it was announced by George Staples, of Charleston, Wednesday. It will be called the "Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center."

Mr. Staples, and his associates, have purchased the tract of land on which the center will be constructed from Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Roth and surveying the property was started by Alex Waters last Thursday.

It is estimated, Mr. Staples said, that when the project is completed it will represent an investment of around three and a half million dollars.

Under plans of the architects, A. F. and Arthur Stauder, of St. Louis, the shopping center will be built in four stages and is expected to be completed in three years.

The first stage involves building stores providing 177,410 square feet -- all of which is already under commitment.

In the second stage the rentable area will be increased to 217,789 square feet; in the third stage, the rentable area will be increased to 267,739 square feet and, in the fourth and final stage the total rentable area under roof will amount to $332,655 square feet.

The location will be on a tract of land fronting on S. Kingshighway from Murray Lane to the Pepsi Cola warehouse and 1,000 feet from Kingshighway to Scott Street on Murray Lane. The west side of the tract extends 1,465 feet south and back of the Pepsi Cola building which takes a 300 foot by 300 foot southeast corner.

The Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center, to quote Mr. Staples, "Will have something of everything for everybody."

Provision is being made in the plans, he said, for a supermarket with 20,130 square feet; a drug store with 5,750 square feet; a junior department store (variety store) with 22,780 square feet; a small department store with 30,065 square feet; a big department store with 72,945 square feet (52,820 square feet on first floor and 20,125 square feet on a second floor); a tire-battery and auto supply store with 6,708 square feet; a number of small shops as yet undetermined as to space and an outside garden area stopped with a fiberglass cover for the display and sale of shrubs, garden equipment etc.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. AP -- Formation of a western Missouri junior college district was approved Tuesday in a special election in 11 school districts in this area.

The final vote was announced today as 11,418 in favor and 5,272 against. The St. Joseph district voted heavily in favor, 10,304 for and 2,060 against. The college would be located here.

Murder Charges Are Filed In Court at New Madrid

NEW MADRID -- First degree murder charges were filed against two persons who appeared before Judge Erle Wright this week in sessions of the New Madrid County Magistrate Court.

The two, Jeremiah Patton of New Madrid and Joe Willie Williams, both Negroes, were charged following separate incidents. Each waived his preliminary hearing in the Magistrate Court and was ordered held for trial in the Circuit Court with bonds set at $10,000 each.

Luke Norris and Maurice Dobbs, charged with forgery, also faced the Judge this week. Norris waived his preliminary hearing in the lower court and was held for the Circuit Court with his bond set at $500. Dobbs paid $18 court costs and his case was dismissed.

Alexander Marathon was bound over for trial in the Circuit Court with bond set at $2,000. Marathon was charged with burglary and larceny. He, too, waived his preliminary hearing in the Magistrate Court.

Three persons were fined for violations of the game laws; Roy C. Chambers and L. H. Moffett paid $35 each for possessing and transporting fish illegally and for fishing without a permit. Robert Parnell paid $15 for hunting without a permit.

Nineteen truckers were fined for exceeding legal load limits this week. Six of that number were fined amounts exceeding $100. A. A-1 Concrete Foundation paid $220 for an overage of 2750 pounds; Rubin Biggs paid $255 for 3100 pounds; Georgia-Pacific, $155 for 2100; Murphy Transportation, $145 for 2000; Burlington Industries, $130 for 1850; and Viking Freight, $110 for 1650.

Other violations were as follows; careless and imprudent driving -- P. V. Boyd, $35, Jerry Wayne Rackley, $25; vehicle overlength -- Trans Cold Express, $15, Charles D. Brewer, $11; excess speed -- Glen W. Wilmurth, $25, William L. Capehart, $20; vehicle overheight -- Sikeston Implement Company and Parkhill Trucking Company, $11 each; no operator's license -- Milton Backus, $15; improper muffler -- Larry Dee Taul, $11; improper operator's license -- Willis Albert West, $50; vehicle overwidth -- Massey Brothers & Cook, $15.

Johnson's Inauguration Day a Melange Of Solemnity and Fractured Security; President Proves to be a "Man of Iron"

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's inauguration day turned out to be a remarkable melange of solemnity, folksiness and fractured security.

The security was broken by the President himself. The inaugural parade had hardly begun when the ebullient President jumped out of his bullet-proof limousine. In long strides he proceeded to the band of his alma mater, Southwest Texas State College, and shook the hands of four girl banner bearers.

The important part was, of course, the swearing in and the inaugural address. And the reaction to this speech, in which Johnson branded poverty and ignorance as national enemies, and said such evils as racial injustice and international hatreds must go, was generally favorable.

Many Republicans joined Democrats in applauding the goals, if not perhaps all the methods. Example: Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, who was deposed by colleagues as House Republican leader, called the speech "excellent." He added that of course there could be differences about specific programs.

The 56-year-old President, in his great happiness, proved to be an iron man physically. He wound up the long day with an arduous round of hall-hopping.

Accompanied by the First Lady in her jonquil yellow satin dress, he attended the inaugural ball, spread out over five great halls. Some 26,000 people had paid $25 a ticket for these king-sized "dances." The decor, symbolizing "America the Beautiful," featured shining seas, waves of amber grain and spacious skies.

The Johnsons' first stop on the ball circuit was at the Mayflower Hotel. The President led the First Lady to the dance floor, and danced with her briefly before changing partners nine times. Then he spotted Mrs. Clifton Daniel, daughter of former President Harry S Truman. He lifted her over the rail of her box and made several turns around the dance floor with her while several hundred guests applauded.

During the afternoon, the President had the time of his life watching the big inaugural parade pass his reviewing stand in front of the White House.

When he got to the White House, attendants brought the beagle "Him" and the white collie "Blanco" to him and the President lifted Him up into the leather easy chair reserved for the chief executive in the reviewing stand.

The dog stayed only briefly, perhaps because Lady Bird foresaw trouble. She is reported to have hinted strongly that Blanco is an outdoors dog, used to romping, and if he started romping in the reviewing stand things could get embarrassing.

When the Georgia float rolled by, the President kept pointing, calling Lady Bird's attention, as if to say, "Look, ma."

The float was a model of a Civil War railroad train, and represented the Lady Bird special which chugged through the South in the last campaign.

The President kept giving the high sign of friendship to all and sundry paraders, including Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, who has given the national Democratic administrations a peck of trouble.

The President was particularly joyous over the band from the Chicago Fire Department. These experts play music scored for sirens, bells and the hissing of fire extinguishers. They are led by a St. Bernard dog with a hat on.

Probably the most tired marchers Wednesday night were the "Barbarettes" of Santa Barbara, Calif. These ladies high-kicked their way all down Pennsylvania Avenue, in a striking display of comeliness.

Least tired? Probably the "highty-tighty" band of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. A march of a couple of miles is a breeze to them. They once got caught up in a five-mile parade in the Deep South, and by the end they had played "Dixie" 72 times.

Thomas W. Gleason, president of the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association, says he has received enough petitions and telephone calls to assure acceptance of the proposed contract with the New York Shipping Association.

But even if his prediction proves correct, contract disputes in other ports could prolong the 11-day walkout that has idled 343 ships on the East Coast.

Some 60,000 men are idle and estimates of the cost to the national economy range from $20 million to $67 million a day.

However, an Associated Press survey indicated that the strike's full impact has not been felt in some areas.

Boston reported losing $500,000 weekly. Officials commented that many industries apparently were unaffected since they had not used up inventories of raw materials since the walkout began.

New York's loss is figured at $1.2 million a day.

The Gulf Coast walkout has more than quadrupled the import of bananas at Tampa, Fla., where dock workers are unaffected since they are under a separate contract. Most of the fruit was diverted from New Orleans.

Winston Losing Ground

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill has become weaker still, steadily losing ground to the effects of the stroke he suffered last Friday.

A new deterioration in the 90-year-old statesman's circulation was reported Wednesday night by his physician, Lord Moran, who said in the 13th bulletin he had issued on Churchill's condition:

"The weakness of Sir Winston's circulation is more marked. There is nothing else to report."

Interpreting the physician's announcement, a medical consultant said: "This indicates that what have been days of waiting may now be shortened to hours. The report of weakened circulation reveals that blood pressure is dropping and general bodily functions must soon fail."

Lord Moran went to Churchill's bedside three times Wednesday, including an unexpected call in the afternoon. Asked Wednesday night if Churchill's life was at a "low ebb," he replied, "Yes."

As newsmen waiting near Churchill's Hyde Park Gate home sought additional information on the former prime minister's condition, Moran added: "His condition is stationary. There is nothing more I can say."

The reference to Sir Winston's circulation was the first since the initial bulletin last Friday, which said he had had a cold, then developed a circulatory weakness following a cerebreal thrombosis.

Churchill has apparently been sleeping or in a coma most of the time since he was stricken. Moran's medical reports have indicated he has felt no pain.

Churchill had been reported restless Tuesday, but at midday Wednesday Moran said the patient had slept peacefully through the night and morning.

Churchill, too ill to be moved to a hospital, lay in his ground-floor back bedroom overlooking a garden behind the brick home at No. 28 Hyde Park Gate.

His family stayed close at hand in London, as they have done since the stroke.

A handful of newsmen kept watch at the entrance to the deadend street.

Propane Gas Line Explodes near the Osage-3 Injured

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) --A pipeline exploded east of Osage City today and as gas collected in low pockets two cars blew up, injuring three people.

Two were reported seriously burned and were taken to St. Mary's hospital in Jefferson City.

The gas was still burning fiercely at the point of the rupture more than an hour after the initial blast.

The highway patrol blocked off the area and ordered residents to turn out their pilot lights and drivers to turn off their heaters to prevent further blasts.

One farmer said a whole valley was ablaze for a few seconds. There was no wind as the temperature stood in the mid-twenties and the weather bureau did not expect any increase in wind to blow the collected gas away.

Scouts To Go To Church Scout Week

Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorers in the Southeast Missouri Council, Boy Scouts of America, will fulfill their obligations to be "faithful in their religious duties" by attending religious services in connection with Boy Scout Week which observes the 55th aniversary of the national boys' organization.

Scouts of Jewish faith will attend Sabbath services on Friday evening (Feb. 5), while other Scouts in uniform will attend their own churches with their parents on Sunday (Feb. 7).

Many churches plan to use the Boy Scout Week theme Strengthen America's Heritage and to recognize their leaders and Scouts as part of services or special programs, according to A. J. Drinkwater, Jr., chairman of the Scout council's camping activities committee.

While not a religious teaching movement, the Boy Scouts of America believes that no boy can grow to a successful manhood without a firm belief in God Drinkwater said.

Building to Take 3 Years

A huge shopping center fronting 1,165 feet on S. Kingshighway south from Murray Lane, and 1,000 feet on Murray Lane from Kingshighway to Scott street is in prospect for Sikeston it was announced by George Staples, of Charleston, Wednesday. It will be called the "Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center."

Mr. Staples, and his associates, have purchased the tract of land on which the center will be constructed from Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Roth and surveying the property was started by Alex Waters last Thursday.

It is estimated, Mr. Staples said, that when the project is completed it will represent an investment of around three and a half million dollars.

Under plans of the architects, A. F. and Arthur Stauder, of St. Louis, the shopping center will be built in four stages and is expected to be completed in three years.

The first stage involves building stores providing 177,410 square feet -- all of which is already under commitment.

In the second stage the rentable area will be increased to 217,789 square feet; in the third stage, the rentable area will be increased to 267,739 square feet and, in the fourth and final stage the total rentable area under roof will amount to $332,655 square feet.

The location will be on a tract of land fronting on S. Kingshighway from Murray Lane to the Pepsi Cola warehouse and 1,000 feet from Kingshighway to Scott Street on Murray Lane. The west side of the tract extends 1,465 feet south and back of the Pepsi Cola building which takes a 300 foot by 300 foot southeast corner.

The Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center, to quote Mr. Staples, "Will have something of everything for everybody."

Provision is being made in the plans, he said, for a supermarket with 20,130 square feet; a drug store with 5,750 square feet; a junior department store (variety store) with 22,780 square feet; a small department store with 30,065 square feet; a big department store with 72,945 square feet (52,820 square feet on first floor and 20,125 square feet on a second floor); a tire-battery and auto supply store with 6,708 square feet; a number of small shops as yet undetermined as to space and an outside garden area stopped with a fiberglass cover for the display and sale of shrubs, garden equipment etc.

Semo College Gets Grant For Special Math Program

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- Southeast Missouri State College has been awarded $18,780 by the National Science Foundation for the operation of a science and mathematics enrichment program for high school students this summer.

The six-week program, which will run from June 21 to July 30, will be for a maximum of 60 students who are about to enter their senior year in high school, who are recommended for their interest and ability in science or mathematics.

The program at SEMO State will be aimed at building up work that the students cannot get in their own high schools because of lack of facilities, and is also conceived as a stimulant to general interest in science and mathematics through the students as they return to their high schools for the final year of study.

Participants in the program will live on campus, and eat in college dining halls. The NSF grant covers instructions and fees for laboratory work, but students will be asked to pay their own room and board whenever possible, although financial help will be available where absolutely necessary.

The summer session will consist of four main study areas, from which students will elect one, and at least one supplementary class for all students.

The courses to be offered include Growth and Development (biology), taught by Dr. John Hinni; Atomic and Molecular Chemistry, taught by Dr. E. L. Bahn; The Hydrologic Cycle (earth science), taught by Dr. C. E. Williams; and Modern Algebra, taught by Mr. Harold Hager.

In addition to the major courses, which will be daily lectures and laboratory work, a supplementary course in Probability and Statistics will be held three times a week.

Dr. Robert Kuster, director of the program, said that plans will be completed late this month, and that information will be sent to school officials throughout this area.

Murder Charges Are Filed In Court at New Madrid

NEW MADRID -- First degree murder charges were filed against two persons who appeared before Judge Erie Wright this week in sessions of the New Madrid County Magistrate Court.

The two, Jeremiah Patton of New Madrid and Joe Willie Williams, both Negroes, were charged following separate incidents. Each waived his preliminary hearing in the Magistrate Court and was ordered held for trial in the Circuit Court with bonds set at $10,000 each.

Luke Norris and Maurice Dobbs, charged with forgery, also faced the Judge this week. Norris waived his preliminary hearing in the lower court and was held for the Circuit Court with his bond set at $500. Dobbs paid $18 court costs and his case was dismissed.

Alexander Marathon was bound over for trial in the Circuit Court with bond set at $2,000. Marathon was charged with burglary and larceny. He, too, waived his preliminary hearing in the Magistrate Court.

Three persons were fined for violations of the game laws: Roy C. Chambers and L. H. Moffett paid $35 each for possessing and transporting fish illegally and for fishing without a permit. Robert Parnell paid $15 for hunting without a permit.

Nineteen truckers were fined for exceeding legal load limits this week. Six of that number were fined amounts exceeding $100. A. A-1 Concrete Foundation paid $220 for an overage of 2750 pounds; Rubin Biggs paid $255 for 3100 pounds; Georgia-Pacific, $155 for 2100; Murphy Transportation, $145 for 2000; Burlington Industries, $130 for 1850; and Viking Freight, $110 for 1650.

Other violations were as follows: careless and imprudent driving -- P. V. Boyd, $35, Jerry Wayne Rackley, $25; vehicle overlength -- Trans Cold Express, $15, Charles D. Brewer, $11; excess speed -- Glen W. Wilmurth, $25, William L. Capehart, $20; vehicle overheight -- Sikeston Implement Company and Parkhill Trucking Company, $11 each; no operator's license -- Milton Backus, $15; improper muffler -- Larry Dee Taul, $11; improper operator's license -- Willis Albert West, $50; vehicle overwidth -- Massey Brothers & Cook, $15.

MATERIAL ABUNDANCE IS NOT ENOUGH

As always, with the year's ending, there was a flood of reports on what had happened in this nation and the world along with all manner of forecasts of things to come.

Many of these summaries dealt with the progress of the U. S. economy during momentous 1964. In area after area, industry after industry, there were notable gains, some of a truly spectacular dimension. Records fell like tenpins. All in all, despite certain dark sports, the system we call free enterprise brilliantly demonstrated its astonishing st[illegible] vigor, purposefulness, and imagination. And the material results were fully shared by the many, not just the few. In sum, the system demonstrated once again, and perhaps more effectively than ever before, its superiority over any yet devised by man.

Other backward looks concerned themselves with a world situation in which question mark is piled upon question mark, and confusion compounds confusion. It is very certain that reappraisals of our policy have now become unavoidable--toward Asia, Europe, Latin America, almost everywhere. Far-reaching changes took place in the world during the 12 brief months of the year. Powerful as we are, rich as we are as a nation, well meaning as we may be, there is no room for complacency.

And that can be said of our domestic affairs as well as our posture in the larger world. It is very easy, when incomes are high, the standard of living is at a peak, and we have reached an astonishing degree of material well-being, to become complacent and to let values become warped and atrophied.

The point is that material abundance is not enough. It is important--vastly so. But the long-run strength of a people cannot be measured just in terms of goods and services. It must be measured, rather, in what goes on within our hearts and minds. If human freedom, here or anywhere, is to be perpetuated it must continually be fought for. The weapons are many--self-reliance, a sense of individual responsibility, a concept of duty that has nothing to do with material advantage, and spiritual belief. These, among others, are eternal verities.

It may be hard to remember and to act on this in an era in which everything is huge--government, business and industry, the labor organizations, the farm groups. The individual, some may think, is dwarfed by the forces that surround his life. And so he will be if he takes that attitude. The very conditions of today present the individual with his greatest challenge. He, in the mass, decides what his nation shall be like. He, in the mass, decides, for example, whether he is to retain the dignity and the independence that the founders bequeathed to him or whether he is to supinely accept a welfare state in which he can only be a statistic whose rights and liberties grow ever fewer.

We need to constantly remember and reaffirm those principles and virtues which built this nation, during years in which living was incredibly hard and the price paid for freedom was blood and travail.

Thomas Jefferson wrote long ago, "The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time." We have the gift--now it is up to us to keep it intact.

There's a $580-million argument about whether whiplash injuries to the neck are serious or minor, whether whiplash is a medical term or one favored only by defense lawyers, and whether whiplash injuries even need treatment.

Oddly enough, one doctor who's heavily involved in the dispute is the same one who coined the word "whiplash." Dr. Harold Crowe, chairman of the surgical conference of the Los Angeles Orthopedic Hospital, coined the word 35 years ago. Today, after studying 300 cases of whiplash, he found that 282 had simple strains that would get well if left alone and only 18 required medical treatment. In his opinion, real whiplash is rare.

Dr. Crowe said that whiplash victims recover quickly after a court settlement.

It's been estimated by the Defense Research Institute, a research organization for defense lawyers, that whiplash injuries accounted for $580 million in compensation for alleged neck injuries in 1961 alone.

Whiplash cases are most often caused by rear-end collisions, a common form of accident especially on turnpikes and expressways. The National Safety Council estimates that nearly half of all turnpike accidents were motor vehicle collisions, "mostly rear-end collisions," the Council reports, and nearly one-third of the rear-end collisions involved a stopped vehicle.

To prevent rear-end collisions, one answer is to keep a proper interval between cars. Another solution, for night rear-end collisions, is being used by 15 states. This is the use of reflective license plates so that stopped or parked cars can be seen at night, even if their lights are turned off.

Motor vehicle collisions, including rear-end accidents, are a particular problem in farm or rural areas. Of 14,700 collisions reported by the National Safety Council in 1961, more than 12,000 occurred in rural areas.

The argument over whiplash will get hotter, in all probability. The accident rate in 1964. all accidents - was up rather than down.

Whenever I have found myself jilted or broke or insulted, I have found solace in work.

A reader who seems to agree that work is a panacea for whatever ails the human spirit, wonders why work satisfies us.

"Does it primarily satisfy our energy, duty, vanity, puritanism, honesty, or what?" he asks.

Work satisfies my self-respect. I don't enjoy holidays or recreations, except as dessert to top off a good day's work. At times I have been in a position where I did not have to work, but I never quit, because I knew I would not be happy.

I have never envied an idler. I have never longed for release from work.

Sometimes I tell my housekeeper that I hate my harness, but she, being an wise woman, laughs at me and says I would work even though I were paid nothing. I fear she is right.

I value friends highly, but I often suspect we pay too high a price for friendship. The lives of some of us are governed by the opinions of half a dozen friends. We submit to this domination as though these six people were essential to our happiness. I have pulled up roots a few times and transplanted myself. Always I have found new associations that were congenial. The new friends were rarely any better than the old, but they were about as good.

That the world is a small place was observed long ago. Each decade it gets smaller. As it contracts, due to rapid transportation and communication, it becomes more interesting. We become less dependent on our neighbors for companionship. Our friends may be scattered in a dozen cities, but we may see them almost as often as though they lived on our street.

Freedom from the pettiness of a restricted environment is one of the real gains of this century.

NO UPROAR, PLEASE!

The President signed his Captive Nations Week Proclamation early this year - on June 20 at 4 p.m., an hour (of a Saturday) at which reporters are hard to find around the White House. It not only languished for attention in the press, but was even weaker than the Kennedy proclamation in that it failed to mention that national self-determination for all nations is an established principle in American thinking. Neither proclamation, however, mentioned Communism as the malevolent force that kept these captive nations captive.

Dr. Lev. E. Dobriansky, a professor of economics at Georgetown University and author of the Captive Nations Week Resolution, enacted by Congress as a Public Law in 1959, points out that while few Americans were aware of anything special about the week of July 12-18, neither was Khrushchev aroused this year as he was in 1959!

Very cool, we're playing the Cold War. In fact, as Dr. Dobriansky says: "The road we are traveling and the rate at which we are going lead logically to the question: 'Who's next?' in the roll call of captive nations."

Who knows but what we may be next? And it's clearly Administration policy not to irritate the Keeper.

A U. S. EXPORT

Imitation, we have all heard, is the sincerest form of flattery. And, like so many of the old saws, this one has a full content of truth.

It can be applied to the American mass distribution system which has found enthusiastic imitators throughout much of the civilized world.

Some years ago American-type supermarkets were shown at the great Brussels Fair and in a number of other major European cities. The chain store people did the job at the request of interested U. S. government agencies. The markets were smash hits. And the multitude of foreign consumers who saw them made it abundantly clear that this was the kind of distribution they wanted. So enterprising European merchants bowed to popular demand, and supermarkets have been established in many European cities where they enjoy a flourishing trade.

This is a far cry from the centuries-old retail system whereby one had to go to one store for meat, to another for vegetables and so on until the market basket was filled. Here in the U. S. we take the mass distribution principle for granted. But when it was first pioneered by the chains a great many skeptics considered this merchandising innovation totally unpractical and foresaw nothing but failure.

As we all know, they were 100 per cent wrong. Mass distribution, based as it is on big turnover at small unit profits, has made a vitally important contribution to our living standards. And now it is doing the same thing abroad.

WHERE YOUR TAX MONEY GOES

Congressman Abele of Ohio has looked into some of the more unusual federal appropriations of our tax money. As recounted by the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, here are a few:

$2,100 to look into the behavior of barren-ground caribou.

These studies are of specialized value. But it is difficult to see how they are the responsibility of the federal government. They represent the sort of things that is, and should be, undertaken by universities, foundations and the various private research centers.

The amounts involved, it will be argued, are small. But a total of all the extra-curricular activities, so to speak, that the government now supports would reach a mighty impressive figure. Economical government can be achieved only if every nonessential expenditure is eliminated -- whether the sum involved be $10,000 or $10 million and whether the project involves a power plant or the social behavior of ants!

H. L. Hunt Says

HOW TO RULE THE WORLD

Suppose that you are a leading member of a very small group of men holding views utterly foreign to those professed by the great majority, yet ambitious to seize power in every nation on earth.

Suppose that your group is outlawed in every nation, with all the established guardians of morality and order against you.

Suppose that in spite of these obstacles, you and your confederates intend to rule the world. What will your strategy be?

You will have to work night and day to break down the established order and the moral standards of every nation in the world.

You will have to try to teach men that white is black, and day is night; that freedom is slavery, and slavery is freedom.

You will have to burn down every house standing in order to build your new dwellings upon the ashes.

But to do this, you cannot simply rush out with a firebrand. You must penetrate, infiltrate, and gradually undermine the foundations of all that stands against you. And as the weakened nations fall, one by one, into your hands, you must convince those remaining free that despite all the evidence, you have no designs upon any of them.

If you are a communist, this is the only strategy that can ever bring you success. And it will fit your purpose to use it all over the world.

Doc. Duncan Says

It would be the part of prudence for Unk to stop, look and listen, and take a close look around home. With bonded, private, and public debt, plus taxes on consumers, bordering on calamity, most thinking people feel that a hesitation in our economy could trigger a rash of absentee land-lords selling homes, farms, and etc. for taxes and bonded debts like in the 1930s, only multiplied many times. This could trigger a takeover by the people. Call it what you may, it would be ironical indeed if Unk spent his all to prop up other nations then had no prop of his own. It's been a beautiful dream but it's time to wake up to the facts of life, economics and one way friendships.

Man has always yearned for a Utopia on earth - whether he deserves one or not.

The inauguration of Lyndon Baines Johnson as 36th President of the United States puts into motion one of the greatest drives in history in this direction - the achievement of what he has called the "Great Society."

Some of his countrymen cavil at the term. They think it grandiose —in effect, no more than another political slogan.

But it is hard to see why becoming a "Great Society" should be less than the American goal. Surely in the long dark narrative of the human race, no other major power has been in a better position to make a better human society, a more livable environment.

We have the resources and the skills to house our people satisfactorily, to feed them well, to improve their health and to educate them to a higher level. We have the ability to do all this -- if we but have the will.

Some 2,500 years ago a Chinese philosopher named Laotse remarked, "The journey of a thousand miles begins with the first step."

The United States already has taken many steps toward the achievement of a "Great Society." It also has taken a few side steps — probably some backward steps, too — along the way. But from the time of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, the splendid promise of the American dream has led us through wilderness toward the creation of a more durable fate and a more humane existence.

As a practical man who knows practical politics, Johnson is certain to try to make our next steps forward giant ones. Although there may be —surely will be — partisan arguments about methods, the end in view ultimately is nonpartisan.

There are hopeful portents that the goal of a "Great Society" is attainable. While we live in the most murderous century of all, we also live in the most humanitarian century of all. Probably never have more men slain each other than in the 20th century; yet never have more men been helped by each other.

We've made more widows than any past generation. But we have also done more to conquer disease, tear down barriers of space and time, increase knowledge, and distribute the fruits of our labor more equitably.

We haven't stood still. We have come a long way.

Perhaps we have even come far enough to realize that no one land, no matter how strong, can safely remain forever as an island of prosperity in a vast puddle of restless poverty.

WASHINGTON -- It's been traditional throughout most of American history that the President and the Vice President of the United States have not loved each other. Sometimes their enmity has been open, as when Vice President Charles G. Dawes failed to turn up for a tie vote to aid President Calvin Coolidge in the Senate. Sometimes it has smoldered below the surface, as with Richard Nixon and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

But the vice presidency, entrusted mainly with the duty of waiting for the President to die, is not conducive to harmony between the two top men of any administration.

This week, two men of great vigor, great experience, and somewhat opposite backgrounds begin four years as a team. And the big question asked by the politicians is: Will Lyndon Johnson and Hubert Humphrey get along together?

Their backgrounds would appear to lead them along opposite paths.

Hubert began life over a South Dakota drugstore. Lyndon began life as a Texas schoolteacher. Hubert got into politics with the backing of the radical Farmer-Labor party, to become mayor of Minneapolis, then ran for the Senate in 1948, with Southern Democrat conservatives putting money into the campaign to defeat him. They remembered how Hubert had stormed the Democratic convention in 1944 to oppose the watered-down civil rights plank and tell the Democrats: "Get out of the shadow of states rights and walk forthrightly in the bright sunshine of human rights."

--CAUTIOUS LBJ--

Johnson began his political life as assistant to Rep. Richard Kleberg of Texas, co-owner of the King ranch and one of the most conservative leaders of Texas democracy. Lyndon's climb up the political ladder was backed by Texas gas and oil, though he also sat at the feet of a practical Texas liberal, Sam Rayburn.

Johnson played his cards cautiously while Hubert was incautious, courageous, and, in the opinion of many politicians, indiscreet. He was probably first in proposing more lost cause which later became victorious causes than any man since William Jennings Bryan. But by the time they won victories, other people had been able to claim credit for them.

He took a stand against nuclear testing seven years before John F. Kennedy negotiated a treaty putting it into law. He persuaded the State Department ten years ago to from a committee to explore disarmament. This was seven years before Eisenhower acted on the suggestion.

He proposed food for India, food for East Berlin, cultural exchanges between the United States and Communist nations, long before the Eisenhower administration adopted them as official American policy. And eight years ago he proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps which has now become part of Johnson's anti-poverty program.

Humphrey is a more polished speaker than Johnson. He talks in machine-gun bursts, pours out both humor and vitriol; has coined such phrases as: "The symbol of the Republican Party should be the mole -- it sees only in the darkness, is blinded by the sunlight."

Furthermore Humphrey bucked Lyndon Johnson for the presidency in 1956 and bucked him hard. And when Lyndon was Senate leader during the Eisenhower administration, Humphrey was one of those restless Democrats who believed LBJ was pulling his punches, wanted him to be more aggressive against Ike.

This nettled Johnson, and the two men had a showdown.

"I was trying to make you a better leader," Humphrey told him.

In brief, all the ingredients are present in the personalities and backgrounds of these two men to cause the usual friction between President and Vice President.

Yet they share the same goals. Both have seen a lot of poverty, both share the goal of making the United States a better place to live in.

Johnson can never forget his experience as Texas Administrator of the National Youth Administration, the men selling apples on the street corners during the days of the Great Depression. Humphrey was a clerk in his family's drugstore, and up until recently had to go out and fill speaking engagements to augment his slender Senate salary.

Though he isn't as eloquent as Humphrey, Johnson is also just as dedicated to peace. He has gone much further than his State Department advisors in working for arms reduction and better East-West relations.

But the most important bond between these two men is mutual respect. Both have been through the political mill, both have differed vigorously but fought hard on the same side politically. Battles create respect and friendship.

Said the new Vice President recently to a friend: "Lyndon is going to be a great president. He is working like hell. He knows government -- no one knows government better. He wants to be a great president, and he will."

That's the background of the two top men of the Johnson Administration -- two men who can growl at each other, kid each other, but -- as I have watched them -- basically love each other. I'll report on their joint problems in another column later.

New York: -- Revolutionary youth cadres, bearded like their heroes, Lenin and Trotsky, have been spotted on the fringes of recent mass strikes here. They were driven off. Their literature was dumped and destroyed. Warnings were dispatched via the grapevine -- they'd be mauled if they showed again.

They did not show. They had put in their time on the "action front." Their assignment had been to attempt to stir the picket lines. Their leaflets had urged the rejection of settlements and the prolongation of the strikes. Though on the waterfront they had run from huskier men, they had proven their willingness to attempt to "infiltrate." They scurried because they were new at this "action program." They had taken "party discipline." They had proven they were good "Mao-ists" -- followers of little parties which are the vogue amongst the "in" group of the beatnik youth now dubbed by one national labor chief as the "sickniks."

But the young hero worshippers, who see Mao Tse-tung as the dialectical successor to Lenin and Trotsky, are disturbing others besides the authorities and the labor leaders. The Mao-ists, sneering at the old Communist party chiefs as capitalist deviationists, are alarming the officials of the U. S. section of the Moscow controlled international.

Without new youthful recruits the American Communist Party will wither away. The average age of its 10,000 members is upwards of 55 years. Many of its leaders have died in the past year. Its hitherto secret regional units have been warning the Communists' national office here on West 23rd St. that there must be new blood--and soon.

So, word has come from Moscow for the Communist Party U.S.A. to revitalize itself. It has been told that the activity on the university fronts is just not enough. The Party must now come into the open. It must rebuild itself around a network of clubs.

The theme of the revival must be anti-war. It must use the clubs as a base for an ever increasing number of demonstrations urging the withdrawal from Viet Nam and all military bases around the world.

Action of the clubs must be put on a "concentration" basis. They must be coordinated by the Communists' national office. They must do the same thing, urge the same action, run the same type of demonstrations on the streets at about the same time.

The national office must be beefed up, said the dictum. And the new national office organizers must not stay in New York. They are to go out and service their old clubs, revive tottering ones and build new units.

The concentration centers, according to what has been learned of discussions at regional meetings of the Party's high command, must be in the Midwest. There must be special "saturation" of the "industrial" belt. This means western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Michigan.

In the industrial section the emphasis must be on "working class youth." Once these are found, organized and trained, some of them must be peeled off and sent south for infiltration there.

During recent conferences the Party officials have been promised ample funds for the youth drive. To avoid appearances of control and financing from Moscow, the Party as a ruse has been ordered to launch a fund-raising campaign for the fight against the U.S. on the judicial front.

The Communist Party goes on trial in Washington on March 15 on charges of failing to register as a Communist action group under the 1950 Internal Security Act.

The Communist international will make this a global cause celebre. Committees and parties on all continents have been ordered to pass resolutions protesting the trial as a revival of "McCarthyism."

At the right moment the American Communist Party will launch a campaign for some $50,000. The money will pour in. It always does, mostly in cash. Then the money can be used for any purpose the Party chooses, including the new youth recruitment and club revival and delegations to Congress and vigils at the White House.

The Party hopes its new [illegible] will offer sufficiently exciting competition to the Mao-ist youth to pull the young people into the Party.

There also is no doubt that the streets of the nation's big cities will be the stages for this turbulent drama.

MATERIAL ABUNDANCE IS NOT ENOUGH

As always, with the year's ending, there was a flood of reports on what had happened in this nation and the world along with all manner of forecasts of things to come.

Many of these summaries dealt with the progress of the U. S. economy during momentous 1964. In area after area, industry after industry, there were notable gains, some of a truly spectacular dimension. Records fell like tenpins. All in all, despite certain dark sports, the system we call free enterprise brilliantly demonstrated its astonishing st[illegible] vigor, purposefulness, and imagination. And the material results were fully shared by the many, not just the few. In sum, the system demonstrated once again, and perhaps more effectively than ever before, its superiority over any yet devised by man.

Other backward looks concerned themselves with a world situation in which question mark is piled upon question mark, and confusion compounds confusion. It is very certain that reappraisals of our policy have now become unavoidable--toward Asia, Europe, Latin America, almost everywhere. Far-reaching changes took place in the world during the 12 brief months of the year. Powerful as we are, rich as we are as a nation, well meaning as we may be, there is no room for complacency.

And that can be said of our domestic affairs as well as our posture in the larger world. It is very easy, when incomes are high, the standard of living is at a peak, and we have reached an astonishing degree of material well-being, to become complacent and to let values become warped and atrophied.

The point is that material abundance is not enough. It is important--vastly so. But the long-run strength of a people cannot be measured just in terms of goods and services. It must be measured, rather, in what goes on within our hearts and minds. If human freedom, here or anywhere, is to be perpetuated it must continually be fought for. The weapons are many--self-reliance, a sense of individual responsibility, a concept of duty that has nothing to do with material advantage, and spiritual belief. These, among others, are eternal verities.

It may be hard to remember and to act on this in an era in which everything is huge--government, business and industry, the labor organizations, the farm groups. The individual, some may think, is dwarfed by the forces that surround his life. And so he will be if he takes that attitude. The very conditions of today present the individual with his greatest challenge. He, in the mass, decides what his nation shall be like. He, in the mass, decides, for example, whether he is to retain the dignity and the independence that the founders bequeathed to him or whether he is to supinely accept a welfare state in which he can only be a statistic whose rights and liberties grow ever fewer.

We need to constantly remember and reaffirm those principles and virtues which built this nation, during years in which living was incredibly hard and the price paid for freedom was blood and travail.

Thomas Jefferson wrote long ago, "The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time." We have the gift--now it is up to us to keep it intact.

There's a $580-million argument about whether whiplash injuries to the neck are serious or minor, whether whiplash is a medical term or one favored only by defense lawyers, and whether whiplash injuries even need treatment.

Oddly enough, one doctor who's heavily involved in the dispute is the same one who coined the word "whiplash." Dr. Harold Crowe, chairman of the surgical conference of the Los Angeles Orthopedic Hospital, coined the word 35 years ago. Today, after studying 300 cases of whiplash, he found that 282 had simple strains that would get well if left alone and only 18 required medical treatment. In his opinion, real whiplash is rare.

Dr. Crowe said that whiplash victims recover quickly after a court settlement.

It's been estimated by the Defense Research Institute, a research organization for defense lawyers, that whiplash injuries accounted for $580 million in compensation for alleged neck injuries in 1961 alone.

Whiplash cases are most often caused by rear-end collisions, a common form of accident especially on turnpikes and expressways. The National Safety Council estimates that nearly half of all turnpike accidents were motor vehicle collisions, "mostly rear-end collisions," the Council reports, and nearly one-third of the rear-end collisions involved a stopped vehicle.

To prevent rear-end collisions, one answer is to keep a proper interval between cars. Another solution, for night rear-end collisions, is being used by 15 states. This is the use of reflective license plates so that stopped or parked cars can be seen at night, even if their lights are turned off.

Motor vehicle collisions, including rear-end accidents, are a particular problem in farm or rural areas. Of 14,700 collisions reported by the National Safety Council in 1961, more than 12,000 occurred in rural areas.

The argument over whiplash will get hotter, in all probability. The accident rate in 1964. all accidents - was up rather than down.

There was this infuriating fellow in town who just couldn't be impressed. Nothing short of dynamite could move him.

Finally, the boys managed to take him duck hunting along with a rather special retriever. When the first duck was downed, the dog jumped out of the boat and walked across the water; he picked up the bird and returned the same way. This happened several times, but the fellow didn't even raise an eyebrow.

His exasperated boat-mates could take it no longer. "For crying out loud, didn't you notice anything unusual about the dog!" said one.

"Sure, the stupid mut can't swim."

Whenever I have found myself jilted or broke or insulted, I have found solace in work.

A reader who seems to agree that work is a panacea for whatever ails the human spirit, wonders why work satisfies us.

"Does it primarily satisfy our energy, duty, vanity, puritanism, honesty, or what?" he asks.

Work satisfies my self-respect. I don't enjoy holidays or recreations, except as dessert to top off a good day's work. At times I have been in a position where I did not have to work, but I never quit, because I knew I would not be happy.

I have never envied an idler. I have never longed for release from work.

Sometimes I tell my housekeeper that I hate my harness, but she, being an wise woman, laughs at me and says I would work even though I were paid nothing. I fear she is right.

We submit to this domination as though these six people were essential to our happiness. I have pulled up roots a few times and transplanted myself. Always I have found new associations that were congenial. The new friends were rarely any better than the old, but they were about as good.

That the world is a small place was observed long ago. Each decade it gets smaller. As it contracts, due to rapid transportation and communication, it becomes more interesting. We become less dependent on our neighbors for companionship. Our friends may be scattered in a dozen cities, but we may see them almost as often as though they lived on our street.

Freedom from the pettiness of a restricted environment is one of the real gains of this century.

NO UPROAR, PLEASE!

The President signed his Captive Nations Week Proclamation early this year - on June 20 at 4 p.m., an hour (of a Saturday) at which reporters are hard to find around the White House. It not only languished for attention in the press, but was even weaker than the Kennedy proclamation in that it failed to mention that national self-determination for all nations is an established principle in American thinking. Neither proclamation, however, mentioned Communism as the malevolent force that kept these captive nations captive.

Dr. Lev. E. Dobriansky, a professor of economics at Georgetown University and author of the Captive Nations Week Resolution, enacted by Congress as a Public Law in 1959, points out that while few Americans were aware of anything special about the week of July 12-18, neither was Khrushchev aroused this year as he was in 1959!

Very cool, we're playing the Cold War. In fact, as Dr. Dobriansky says: "The road we are traveling and the rate at which we are going lead logically to the question: 'Who's next?' in the roll call of captive nations."

Who knows but what we may be next? And it's clearly Administration policy not to irritate the Keeper.

A U. S. EXPORT

Imitation, we have all heard, is the sincerest form of flattery. And, like so many of the old saws, this one has a full content of truth.

It can be applied to the American mass distribution system which has found enthusiastic imitators throughout much of the civilized world.

Some years ago American-type supermarkets were shown at the great Brussels Fair and in a number of other major European cities. The chain store people did the job at the request of interested U. S. government agencies. The markets were smash hits. And the multitude of foreign consumers who saw them made it abundantly clear that this was the kind of distribution they wanted. So enterprising European merchants bowed to popular demand, and supermarkets have been established in many European cities where they enjoy a flourishing trade.

This is a far cry from the centuries-old retail system whereby one had to go to one store for meat, to another for vegetables and so on until the market basket was filled. Here in the U. S. we take the mass distribution principle for granted. But when it was first pioneered by the chains a great many skeptics considered this merchandising innovation totally unpractical and foresaw nothing but failure.

As we all know, they were 100 per cent wrong. Mass distribution, based as it is on big turnover at small unit profits, has made a vitally important contribution to our living standards. And now it is doing the same thing abroad.

WHERE YOUR TAX MONEY GOES

Congressman Abele of Ohio has looked into some of the more unusual federal appropriations of our tax money. As recounted by the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, here are a few:

$2,100 to look into the behavior of barren-ground caribou.

These studies are of specialized value. But it is difficult to see how they are the responsibility of the federal government. They represent the sort of things that is, and should be, undertaken by universities, foundations and the various private research centers.

The amounts involved, it will be argued, are small. But a total of all the extra-curricular activities, so to speak, that the government now supports would reach a mighty impressive figure. Economical government can be achieved only if every nonessential expenditure is eliminated -- whether the sum involved be $10,000 or $10 million and whether the project involves a power plant or the social behavior of ants!

H. L. Hunt Says

HOW TO RULE THE WORLD

Suppose that you are a leading member of a very small group of men holding views utterly foreign to those professed by the great majority, yet ambitious to seize power in every nation on earth.

Suppose that your group is outlawed in every nation, with all the established guardians of morality and order against you.

Suppose that in spite of these obstacles, you and your confederates intend to rule the world. What will your strategy be?

You will have to work night and day to break down the established order and the moral standards of every nation in the world.

You will have to try to teach men that white is black, and day is night; that freedom is slavery, and slavery is freedom.

You will have to burn down every house standing in order to build your new dwellings upon the ashes.

But to do this, you cannot simply rush out with a firebrand. You must penetrate, infiltrate, and gradually undermine the foundations of all that stands against you. And as the weakened nations fall, one by one, into your hands, you must convince those remaining free that despite all the evidence, you have no designs upon any of them.

If you are a communist, this is the only strategy that can ever bring you success. And it will fit your purpose to use it all over the world.

Doc. Duncan Says

It would be the part of prudence for Unk to stop, look and listen, and take a close look around home. With bonded, private, and public debt, plus taxes on consumers, bordering on calamity, most thinking people feel that a hesitation in our economy could trigger a rash of absentee land-lords selling homes, farms, and etc. for taxes and bonded debts like in the 1930s, only multiplied many times. This could trigger a takeover by the people. Call it what you may, it would be ironical indeed if Unk spent his all to prop up other nations then had no prop of his own. It's been a beautiful dream but it's time to wake up to the facts of life, economics and one way friendships.

Man has always yearned for a Utopia on earth - whether he deserves one or not.

The inauguration of Lyndon Baines Johnson as 36th President of the United States puts into motion one of the greatest drives in history in this direction - the achievement of what he has called the "Great Society."

Some of his countrymen cavil at the term. They think it grandiose —in effect, no more than another political slogan.

But it is hard to see why becoming a "Great Society" should be less than the American goal. Surely in the long dark narrative of the human race, no other major power has been in a better position to make a better human society, a more livable environment.

We have the resources and the skills to house our people satisfactorily, to feed them well, to improve their health and to educate them to a higher level. We have the ability to do all this -- if we but have the will.

Some 2,500 years ago a Chinese philosopher named Laotse remarked, "The journey of a thousand miles begins with the first step."

The United States already has taken many steps toward the achievement of a "Great Society." It also has taken a few side steps — probably some backward steps, too — along the way. But from the time of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, the splendid promise of the American dream has led us through wilderness toward the creation of a more durable fate and a more humane existence.

As a practical man who knows practical politics, Johnson is certain to try to make our next steps forward giant ones. Although there may be —surely will be — partisan arguments about methods, the end in view ultimately is nonpartisan.

There are hopeful portents that the goal of a "Great Society" is attainable. While we live in the most murderous century of all, we also live in the most humanitarian century of all. Probably never have more men slain each other than in the 20th century; yet never have more men been helped by each other.

We've made more widows than any past generation. But we have also done more to conquer disease, tear down barriers of space and time, increase knowledge, and distribute the fruits of our labor more equitably.

We haven't stood still. We have come a long way.

Perhaps we have even come far enough to realize that no one land, no matter how strong, can safely remain forever as an island of prosperity in a vast puddle of restless poverty.

New York: -- Revolutionary youth cadres, bearded like their heroes, Lenin and Trotsky, have been spotted on the fringes of recent mass strikes here. They were driven off. Their literature was dumped and destroyed. Warnings were dispatched via the grapevine -- they'd be mauled if they showed again.

They did not show. They had put in their time on the "action front." Their assignment had been to attempt to stir the picket lines. Their leaflets had urged the rejection of settlements and the prolongation of the strikes. Though on the waterfront they had run from huskier men, they had proven their willingness to attempt to "infiltrate." They scurried because they were new at this "action program." They had taken "party discipline." They had proven they were good "Mao-ists" -- followers of little parties which are the vogue amongst the "in" group of the beatnik youth now dubbed by one national labor chief as the "sickniks."

But the young hero worshippers, who see Mao Tse-tung as the dialectical successor to Lenin and Trotsky, are disturbing others besides the authorities and the labor leaders. The Mao-ists, sneering at the old Communist party chiefs as capitalist deviationists, are alarming the officials of the U. S. section of the Moscow controlled international.

Without new youthful recruits the American Communist Party will wither away. The average age of its 10,000 members is upwards of 55 years. Many of its leaders have died in the past year. Its hitherto secret regional units have been warning the Communists' national office here on West 23rd St. that there must be new blood--and soon.

So, word has come from Moscow for the Communist Party U.S.A. to revitalize itself. It has been told that the activity on the university fronts is just not enough. The Party must now come into the open. It must rebuild itself around a network of clubs.

The theme of the revival must be anti-war. It must use the clubs as a base for an ever increasing number of demonstrations urging the withdrawal from Viet Nam and all military bases around the world.

Action of the clubs must be put on a "concentration" basis. They must be coordinated by the Communists' national office. They must do the same thing, urge the same action, run the same type of demonstrations on the streets at about the same time.

The national office must be beefed up, said the dictum. And the new national office organizers must not stay in New York. They are to go out and service their old clubs, revive tottering ones and build new units.

The concentration centers, according to what has been learned of discussions at regional meetings of the Party's high command, must be in the Midwest. There must be special "saturation" of the "industrial" belt. This means western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Michigan.

In the industrial section the emphasis must be on "working class youth." Once these are found, organized and trained, some of them must be peeled off and sent south for infiltration there.

During recent conferences the Party officials have been promised ample funds for the youth drive. To avoid appearances of control and financing from Moscow, the Party as a ruse has been ordered to launch a fund-raising campaign for the fight against the U.S. on the judicial front.

The Communist Party goes on trial in Washington on March 15 on charges of failing to register as a Communist action group under the 1950 Internal Security Act.

The Communist international will make this a global cause celebre. Committees and parties on all continents have been ordered to pass resolutions protesting the trial as a revival of "McCarthyism."

At the right moment the American Communist Party will launch a campaign for some $50,000. The money will pour in. It always does, mostly in cash. Then the money can be used for any purpose the Party chooses, including the new youth recruitment and club revival and delegations to Congress and vigils at the White House.

The Party hopes its new [illegible] will offer sufficiently exciting competition to the Mao-ist youth to pull the young people into the Party.

There also is no doubt that the streets of the nation's big cities will be the stages for this turbulent drama.

ANN LANDERS
Answers your problems

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married only a month and am having troubles I never expected. I've mentioned my problem to a few people but all they do is laugh. They think I'm joking.

Two weeks ago when Denny and I returned from our honeymoon his dog was very glad to see him. Shep had been in the kennels and I figured he would be especially happy to see his master. But it turns out Shep is more important to Denny than I thought. Denny confessed the dog has been sharing his bed for seven years. I was shocked and said so. Denny said "I'm sorry but I can't change things now. It would break Shep's heart."

I haven't had a good night's sleep in two weeks and I don't know what to do. This is no gag. I'm dead serious. You hear about all sorts of kooky problems and I hope you can solve mine. -- HONEYMOON GONE TO THE DOGS

Dear Gone: If your husband can't part with his bow wow at beddy-by time, order twin beds and tell him you hope he and Shep will be very happy --way over there.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a fairly attractive private secretary on the lying side of 30. All the men I work with (or near) are too old, too young, or too married. The women around here are no help. If they knew of an eligible man they'd grab him for themselves.

Every day is like the day before -- no incentive to dress smartly or to change my hair. Who would notice? The jokes I heard today are retreads of the ones I heard last year.

My job pays well but I am dying of boredom. Since you are the lady with all the answers, how about tossing one my way? --SLEEPY HOLLOW

Dear Sleepy: Anyone as bored as you are can't possibly be doing a good job. Do yourself and the company a favor and remove the corpse from the office.

Get a new job. You need to see some new faces and hear some new jokes. People often become hopeless victims of monotony because they are too lethargic to extricate themselves. Get going, Sister. Life can be beautiful -- but ya' gotta help.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me if I did right or wrong. My sister's husband became involved with another woman and she found out about it. They have four lovely children. Divorce is outlawed by her religion so my sister obtained a legal separation.

My husband and I used to see a great deal of them as a couple but when they began to have trouble we decided not to take sides.

Last Friday my husband ran into my brother-in-law and brought him home to dinner. We had a lovely evening and it was pleasant to see him again. Not one word was said about his personal problems.

This morning my sister phoned to say she was disgusted with us for entertaining "that louse" and since we have shown friendship for him she wants nothing more to do with us. Is she justified in her position? --BLACK SHEEP

Dear Sheep: Your sister has no right to tell you whom you may entertain in your home. If she chooses to interpret your act of friendship toward her estranged husband as an act of unfriendliness toward her, I'd say she is the loser, not you.

A mature person would respect your neutrality but obviously your sister does not qualify.

Lonely? Uncomfortable? Just not able to make friends? Write for ANN LANDERS' new booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beche-de-mer

Beche-de-mer is an important article of food of eastern Asia, made from sea cucumbers. They are cooked in sea water and then dried to make soup. The dried product is called trepang by the Chinese.

All About BABIES

LIFE WITH BABY CAN BE A JOY

By Mary K. Macdonald, R.N.

Listening to baby gurgle, seeing the miracle of that first smile, observing baby's response to the marvels of a strange new world -- all of these can be sources of wonder and excitement for the young mother.

Too often, however, the new mother in an unfamiliar role, finds she has a fussing baby on her hands. The unnecessary fears and tensions that result are enough to spoil any enjoyment she might otherwise get from her offspring.

Experienced mothers know that a baby who is physically comfortable and receives a full measure of love and tenderness, will be a happy baby. By observing a few simple rules designed to promote baby's physical comfort and provide the sense of security baby needs, the new and inexperienced mother can spare herself many hours of anxiety.

1. Sleep is important to the new infant. The mattress should be firm, bedding smooth and well tucked in, coverings light and loose to allow free movement.

2. Before baby can move about in his bed by himself, change his position frequently.

3. Keep the temperature in baby's room as even as possible, between 70-75 degrees.

4. Baby's room should be well ventilated but never drafty.

5. Diapers should be soft, absorbent and non-irritating. Even carefully laundered diapers may irritate baby's delicate skin unless all soap has been removed by repeated rinsings. Diaper services guard against this by an elaborate rinsing process and by impregnating the diaper with special antiseptics to help lessen the chances of diaper rash.

6. Make sure baby is always in a clean dry diaper. Cleanse the skin carefully with each change.

7. Don't overdress baby, indoors or out.

8. Try not to take baby outdoors when the weather is windy or damp. In winter, dress baby warmly, covering his hands and ears but not his face.

9. Let your baby feel that everything you do for him is a pleasure to you -- never an unpleasant chore.

10. Play with baby when he's fully awake, after his nap or before his bath. Talk to him, fondle him, rock him in your arms. During the first few weeks, you can't spoil him with too much love.

National Children's Dental Health Week Feb. 7 to 13th

School dental health programs all over America the week of February 7th to 13th will help educate children in how to have clean, healthy teeth. Not only to please the family dentist, but because tooth health in childhood is directly related to growing up into a strong physically good adult.

This dental health week for children was begun seventeen years ago as a one-day event by health education organizations but was subsequently expanded to a week. It is endorsed and promoted by the American Dental Association's large membership of dentists and dental hygienists. The major objective of the Week, as described by Dr. Perry Sandell, educational director of A. D. A. is to further the teaching of proper care of the teeth to early establish good dental health habits for children, to the end that they grow to adulthood with sound teeth.

Besides the A. D. A., state and local dental societies support the Children's Dental Health Week and encourage locally such projects as movies, demonstrations and other related entertainment in the schools.

The country's apple growers have been actively interested in these promotions in schools and elsewhere and through the National Apple Institute have for many years sponsored research on fresh apples in preventive dentistry. Because of well substantiated scientifically done research relative to apples and other fresh fruits and vegetables, dental health authorities endorse apples today for the cleansing action in the mouth, the juiciness and texture of the apple making an excellent "nature's toothbrush".

An apple is easily carried in a school lunch box, or served in a school cafeteria. Eaten last, after sandwich, cookie and glass of milk, dental health authorities say that the apple cleanses, and thus helps preserve teeth. The same idea works for grownups who like a snack at night or any other time. Dental health is of importance at any age after that first tooth makes its appearance, and especially in those early school years when appetites are big, and eating--something -- seems continuous, from breakfast until bed time.

Two Casseroles Will Delight Busy Mothers

Casserole cookery isn't an American idea but it's certainly a popular one.

When a busy homemaker can pop meat and vegetables into one dish and bake in about a half an hour, more or less, it makes easy work of lunch or supper.

Both of these casseroles rely on convenience foods, points out Reba Staggs, home economist for their ease of preparation, their speed in cooking.

Luncheon meat is very easily cubed to go with a plentiful supply of canned corn. It's also a pleasing combination when added to one of the cooked frozen vegetables in sauce. Just cook the meat and vegetables until heated through.

Desert chili has both the flavor and texture to do the honors at a casual supper with friends or a main dish for a teen-age party. Harmonize it with a tossed green salad and fresh fruits for dessert. Look at the simplicity of putting this together!

Midwest Casserole

1 can (12 ounces) luncheon meat, cut in ½-inch cubes
½ cup coarsely crushed cracker crumbs
¼ cup milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 can (1 pound, 1 ounce) cream-style corn
1 tablespoon minced onion
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dry mustard

Combine cracker crumbs and milk. Add egg, cream-style corn, minced onion, salt, pepper and dry mustard. Mix well and fold in cubed luncheon meat. Pour into 1¼-quart casserole. Bake, uncovered, in a moderate oven (350° F.) 30 to 35 minutes. 4 servings.

Desert Chili

2 cans (15 ounces each) chili (without beans)
1 cup chopped onion
4 cups crushed corn chips
2 cups grated sharp Cheddar cheese

Heat chili and onions. Place about ⅓ of the crushed corn chips on the bottom of a 12x8-inch baking dish. Arrange in layers over the corn chips, ½ of the following: chili-onion mixture and grated cheese. Repeat with ⅓ of the corn chips and remaining chili and cheese. Top with remaining corn chips. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 25 minutes. 6 to 8 servings.

Young Traveler Togs

Since winter vacations in sunny climes are becoming more and more popular even the small fry were not forgotten in this resort season's fashion collections. In blue and white rayon and linen blend, the A-line sleeveless popover (left) has a shallow V neckline. White dress underneath has pleated flounced skirt with contrast stitching at hem, sleeves and neck. Two-piece white birdseye pique cruise dress for the young jet set (right) has front-buttoned A-line overblouse and box-pleated skirt. The buttons are brass. These are Helen Lee designs.

Two weeks ago when Denny and I returned from our honeymoon his dog was very glad to see him. Shep had been in the kennels and I figured he would be especially happy to see his master. But it turns out Shep is more important to Denny than I thought. Denny confessed the dog has been sharing his bed for seven years. I was shocked and said so. Denny said "I'm sorry but I can't change things now. It would break Shep's heart."

I haven't had a good night's sleep in two weeks and I don't know what to do. This is no gag. I'm dead serious. You hear about all sorts of kooky problems and I hope you can solve mine. -- HONEYMOON GONE TO THE DOGS

Dear Gone: If your husband can't part with his bow wow at beddy-by time, order twin beds and tell him you hope he and Shep will be very happy --way over there.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a fairly attractive private secretary on the lying side of 30. All the men I work with (or near) are too old, too young, or too married. The women around here are no help. If they knew of an eligible man they'd grab him for themselves.

Every day is like the day before -- no incentive to dress smartly or to change my hair. Who would notice? The jokes I heard today are retreads of the ones I heard last year.

My job pays well but I am dying of boredom. Since you are the lady with all the answers, how about tossing one my way? --SLEEPY HOLLOW

Dear Sleepy: Anyone as bored as you are can't possibly be doing a good job. Do yourself and the company a favor and remove the corpse from the office.

Get a new job. You need to see some new faces and hear some new jokes. People often become hopeless victims of monotony because they are too lethargic to extricate themselves. Get going, Sister. Life can be beautiful -- but ya' gotta help.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me if I did right or wrong. My sister's husband became involved with another woman and she found out about it. They have four lovely children. Divorce is outlawed by her religion so my sister obtained a legal separation.

My husband and I used to see a great deal of them as a couple but when they began to have trouble we decided not to take sides.

Last Friday my husband ran into my brother-in-law and brought him home to dinner. We had a lovely evening and it was pleasant to see him again. Not one word was said about his personal problems.

This morning my sister phoned to say she was disgusted with us for entertaining "that louse" and since we have shown friendship for him she wants nothing more to do with us. Is she justified in her position? --BLACK SHEEP

Dear Sheep: Your sister has no right to tell you whom you may entertain in your home. If she chooses to interpret your act of friendship toward her estranged husband as an act of unfriendliness toward her, I'd say she is the loser, not you.

A mature person would respect your neutrality but obviously your sister does not qualify.

Lonely? Uncomfortable? Just not able to make friends? Write for ANN LANDERS' new booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

All About BABIES

LIFE WITH BABY CAN BE A JOY

By Mary K. Macdonald, R.N.

Listening to baby gurgle, seeing the miracle of that first smile, observing baby's response to the marvels of a strange new world -- all of these can be sources of wonder and excitement for the young mother.

Too often, however, the new mother in an unfamiliar role, finds she has a fussing baby on her hands. The unnecessary fears and tensions that result are enough to spoil any enjoyment she might otherwise get from her offspring.

Experienced mothers know that a baby who is physically comfortable and receives a full measure of love and tenderness, will be a happy baby. By observing a few simple rules designed to promote baby's physical comfort and provide the sense of security baby needs, the new and inexperienced mother can spare herself many hours of anxiety.

1. Sleep is important to the new infant. The mattress should be firm, bedding smooth and well tucked in, coverings light and loose to allow free movement.

2. Before baby can move about in his bed by himself, change his position frequently.

3. Keep the temperature in baby's room as even as possible, between 70-75 degrees.

4. Baby's room should be well ventilated but never drafty.

5. Diapers should be soft, absorbent and non-irritating. Even carefully laundered diapers may irritate baby's delicate skin unless all soap has been removed by repeated rinsings. Diaper services guard against this by an elaborate rinsing process and by impregnating the diaper with special antiseptics to help lessen the chances of diaper rash.

6. Make sure baby is always in a clean dry diaper. Cleanse the skin carefully with each change.

7. Don't overdress baby, indoors or out.

8. Try not to take baby outdoors when the weather is windy or damp. In winter, dress baby warmly, covering his hands and ears but not his face.

9. Let your baby feel that everything you do for him is a pleasure to you -- never an unpleasant chore.

10. Play with baby when he's fully awake, after his nap or before his bath. Talk to him, fondle him, rock him in your arms. During the first few weeks, you can't spoil him with too much love.

Dixie Band Camp Moves To Jonesboro

JONESBORO -- Dixie Band Camp, one of the leading music camps in the country, will be held this summer on the campus of Arkansas State College at Jonesboro, according to an official announcement made by Clint Walker, President of Dixie Band Camp. The camp previously had been held at Monticello.

In making the announcement of the moving of the camp, Mr. Walker stated that the dates for this summer will be June 13 through July 3.

According to Don Minx, Director of Bands at Arkansas State, completely air-conditioned housing will be available for as many as 500 students at the camp. Also, both rehearsal halls will be air-conditioned. Formal concerts will be held in the new Carl R. Reng Student Center.

R. B. "Scrubby" Watson, well-known Dean of Arkansas Band Directors, will be serving his 27th year as Director of the Blue Band and Dean of the Camp. Camp policies and schedules will remain the same as those established in the previous 26 years of existence.

John Alexander, Assistant Band Director and trumpet instructor at Arkansas State, will teach trumpet again this year at Dixie and will serve as coordinator of physical facilities for the camp.

National Children's Dental Health Week Feb. 7 to 13th

School dental health programs all over America the week of February 7th to 13th will help educate children in how to have clean, healthy teeth. Not only to please the family dentist, but because tooth health in childhood is directly related to growing up into a strong physically good adult.

This dental health week for children was begun seventeen years ago as a one-day event by health education organizations but was subsequently expanded to a week. It is endorsed and promoted by the American Dental Association's large membership of dentists and dental hygienists. The major objective of the Week, as described by Dr. Perry Sandell, educational director of A. D. A. is to further the teaching of proper care of the teeth to early establish good dental health habits for children, to the end that they grow to adulthood with sound teeth.

Besides the A. D. A., state and local dental societies support the Children's Dental Health Week and encourage locally such projects as movies, demonstrations and other related entertainment in the schools.

The country's apple growers have been actively interested in these promotions in schools and elsewhere and through the National Apple Institute have for many years sponsored research on fresh apples in preventive dentistry. Because of well substantiated scientifically done research relative to apples and other fresh fruits and vegetables, dental health authorities endorse apples today for the cleansing action in the mouth, the juiciness and texture of the apple making an excellent "nature's toothbrush".

An apple is easily carried in a school lunch box, or served in a school cafeteria. Eaten last, after sandwich, cookie and glass of milk, dental health authorities say that the apple cleanses, and thus helps preserve teeth. The same idea works for grownups who like a snack at night or any other time. Dental health is of importance at any age after that first tooth makes its appearance, and especially in those early school years when appetites are big, and eating--something -- seems continuous, from breakfast until bed time.

Two Casseroles Will Delight Busy Mothers

Casserole cookery isn't an American idea but it's certainly a popular one.

When a busy homemaker can pop meat and vegetables into one dish and bake in about a half an hour, more or less, it makes easy work of lunch or supper.

Both of these casseroles rely on convenience foods, points out Reba Staggs, home economist for their ease of preparation, their speed in cooking.

Luncheon meat is very easily cubed to go with a plentiful supply of canned corn. It's also a pleasing combination when added to one of the cooked frozen vegetables in sauce. Just cook the meat and vegetables until heated through.

Desert chili has both the flavor and texture to do the honors at a casual supper with friends or a main dish for a teen-age party. Harmonize it with a tossed green salad and fresh fruits for dessert. Look at the simplicity of putting this together!

Midwest Casserole

1 can (12 ounces) luncheon meat, cut in ½-inch cubes
½ cup coarsely crushed cracker crumbs
¼ cup milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 can (1 pound, 1 ounce) cream-style corn
1 tablespoon minced onion
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dry mustard

Combine cracker crumbs and milk. Add egg, cream-style corn, minced onion, salt, pepper and dry mustard. Mix well and fold in cubed luncheon meat. Pour into 1¼-quart casserole. Bake, uncovered, in a moderate oven (350° F.) 30 to 35 minutes. 4 servings.

Desert Chili

2 cans (15 ounces each) chili (without beans)
1 cup chopped onion
4 cups crushed corn chips
2 cups grated sharp Cheddar cheese

Heat chili and onions. Place about ⅓ of the crushed corn chips on the bottom of a 12x8-inch baking dish. Arrange in layers over the corn chips, ½ of the following: chili-onion mixture and grated cheese. Repeat with ⅓ of the corn chips and remaining chili and cheese. Top with remaining corn chips. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 25 minutes. 6 to 8 servings.

Delta Pulls Upset On Kelly, Oran Steps On E. P.

Kelly And Delta Win In "B" Games

ORAN -- The Delta Bobcats pulled off the biggest upset yet in this years Scott-Mississippi Tournament by trouncing down Kelly 58-49. Oran showed more reasons why they were seeded number one by dropping an 85-57 bomb on the East Prairie Eagles.

KELLY 49

Delta, led by Ronnie Smith with 20 points, pulled over the Kelly Hawks 58-49. Kelly was the number two seeded team in the tourney. Delta was rightfully seeded, but apparently after last night's game it wasn't quite high enough, for they were number three.

Both teams battled the first frame to come out with a deadlocked 12-12 score. The Bobcats made their big move in the second period by dumping in 15 points while limiting Kelly to 8 to come in at the half leading 27-20.

The Hawks trying to rally, came out the third period to stuff in 16, but Delta was not to be pulled abreast of as they hit 15 to go into the final frame with a 7 point advantage. From there it was Delta.

EAST PRAIRIE 57

The Oran Eagles went out in front to stay the first period to lead by 14, 26-12. They increased their lead to an 18 point bulge as first half play ended. East Prairie never saw daylight from there.

Oran's play was blended primarily into four big pointmakers. Tom Anderson led with 22 and Robert Johnson came in second with 18. Donnie Metz and Ken Steimle each drilled 17.

Southeast Missouri State Goes To Warrensburg

Chicago Best Ever In Pennant Race

The Chicago White Sox strengthened their weak spot in acquiring catcher Johnny Romano and became a stronger American League pennant threat than ever.

Cleveland moved into the pennant contention by getting back right-handed slugger Rocky Colavito, who also figured to make the turnstiles click merrily.

Kansas City got some new faces.

That appears to sum up the three-club, eight-player deal the White Sox, Indians and Athletics announced Wednesday.

The Indians gave up Romano, pitcher Tommy John and outfielder Tommie Agee to the White Sox. Chicago sent outfielders Jim Landis and Mike Hershberger and a still unnamed pitcher to Kansas City and catcher Camilo Carreon to Cleveland. Kansas City sent Colavito to the Indians.

The unnamed new Kansas City pitcher is believed to be either veteran Johnny Buzhardt, Dave DeBusschere or rookie Fred Talbot.

The Indians, who have suffered both on the field and at the gate ever since they traded Colavito to Detroit back in 1960, not only have added right-handed hitting power which they sorely lacked, but regained one of the most popular players ever to wear an Indian uniform.

Gabe Paul estimates the Rock's presence will add at least another 150,000 to Cleveland's attendance next season. The Indians' club president also believes the 31-year-old outfielder's acquisition will make a pennant contender out of last year's sixth-place club. Despite a .274 batting average, Colavito blasted 34 home runs and drove in 102 runs.

The offer came the day after the Indians had acquired Chuck Hinton, a right-handed hitting outfielder, in a trade with Washington.

Cleveland now has four top outfielders in Colavito, Hinton, Leon Wagner and fleet center fielder Vic Davelillo. Manager Birdie Tebbetts may use Rocky at first, or switch Hinton to second, so he can employ all of his power in a balanced line-up.

A left-handed long-ball hitter, the 30-year-old backstop figures to add sock to the White Sox batting order. He hit 19 home runs despite a long layoff due to an injury. He batted .241.

Traded away by the White Sox to the Indians after the 1959 season, Romano developed into one of the league's better catchers. He was named twice to the All-Star team.

"We've been trying to get John back for two years," said White Sox Manager Al Lopez.

Lopez figures that John, a left-hander, will take up some of the southpaw slack created by the departure of left-handers Frank Baumann and Don Mossi.

It's Evansville Still On Top Small Top Ten

The state of Indiana has only one team representing it among the first 10 in The Associated Press' weekly small - college basketball poll today. But it's a mighty good one, the Evansville Aces, who show no signs of relinquishing their position as kings of their group.

Actually, the states of North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania boast the most teams in the latest top ten, two each. Texas, Louisiana and Tennessee also have one apiece.

Evansville picked up 10 first-place votes and 135 points in the balloting by 14 regional experts based on games through last Saturday. The Aces upped their record to 13-0 last week with conquests of Kentucky Wesleyan and St. Joseph's, Ind.

The top ten, with first-place votes in parentheses, and points:

|---|---|
| 1. Evansville (10) | 135 |
| 2. High Point (2) | 114 |
| 3. Winston Salem | 72 |
| 4. Pan American | 53 |
| 5. Grambling | 36 |
| 6. Wittenberg | 31 |
| 7. Carson-Newman | 30 |
| 8. Philadelphia Textile | 21 |

"He's a daddy cat," Mother replied patiently.

"How do we know he's a daddy cat?" the boy asked.

An expectant hush fell over the bus, and the passengers listened attentively to see how Mother would handle this one. She was ready for the challenge. "He's got whiskers, hasn't he?" she said.

Nick Altrock Dies After Long Illness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nick Altrock, one of baseball's most famous funnyman, is dead at 88.

Altrock died Wednesday night after a lengthy illness. He had suffered a stroke 2½ years ago.

Once one of the American League's top pitchers, a sore arm sent Altrock into the comedy field where his zany antics captivated first the rock-ribbed baseball fans, and later, vaudeville audiences.

The showmanship first came to light when he pitched for Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast League before the turn of the century. One day, he gave up a walk and then picked off the runner.

Pleased with himself, he purposely walked seven more men during the game, picking off six of them.

As a comedian, Altrock worked first as a single, capitalizing on a shadow-boxing routine, one-man wrestling bouts, juggling and mimicry. Then the late Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Nationals, teamed him up with another clown, Al Schacht.

The two became fixtures at World Series contests and were a big drawing card for the Nats both at home and on the road.

They were headliners in vaudeville and even made a movie short in Hollywood. They feuded in the early 1930s, and although the act continued, they seldom spoke to each other.

The two were best known for their patomimes of the sports highlights of the day. They enacted the Dempsey-Firpo fight, did a takeoff on Notre Dame's Four Horsemen and made like tennis queens Suzanne Lenglen and Mary Browne.

Most of the wins came in three big seasons with the Chicago White Sox. He was 19-14 in 1904, 21-10 the following year and 20-13 in 1906.

In 1906, he helped hurl the Hitless Wonders to the American League pennant and the world championship. He was chosen over big Ed Walsh as the Chisox starter in the Series, and came through with a 2-1 victory over the rival Chicago Cubs.

Altrock and his wife have made their home in Washington since 1927, but he will be buried in Cincinnati, the city where he was born.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Boston Still Going Like They Will Not Lose

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Boston Celtics haven't lost a game since last year. The way they're going, they may not lose any until next year.

The perennial National Basketball Association champions won their 15th straight outing Wednesday night, crushing the Baltimore Bullets 131-105 with a 40-point splurge in the last quarter.

That inched the Celtics to within two of the NBA's record winning streak, and they could have the mark all to themselves by Sunday.

In other games Wednesday night, the Cincinnati Royals spurted away from the Detroit Pistons in the final five minutes to wrap up a 102-90 decision, and the Los Angeles Lakers boosted their Western Division lead to one full game over idle St. Louis with a 119-103 victory over the New York Knickerbockers.

With Oscar Robertson held to 11 points — only the second time in 16 contests he has failed to top 20 this season — Jerry Lucas took over as the Cincinnati hero. Lucas grabbed 37 rebounds to set a record for Detroit's Cobo Arena and also scored 18 points. Jack Twyman tallied 21 to pace the Royals, who twice blew 10-point leads before pulling away. Eddie Miles topped Detroit with 20 points.

Boston blew a 15-point lead when Baltimore pulled to within 91-90 as Walt Bellamy scored 16 of his 32 points in the third period for the Bullets.

But the Celtics stretched their advantage to 11 points in less than three minutes and won going away. Sam Jones scored 10 of his 34 points in the final period and John Havlicek nine of his 25. Baltimore scored only 15 points in the last quarter.

A 113-112 loss to New York last Dec. 17 is the only defeat for Boston in its last 23 games. With a 40-7 record, the Celtics have opened a 7½-game lead over Cincinnati in the Eastern Division.

The NBA record of 17 in a row was set by the old Washington Capitols in 1946-47 and tied by The Celtics in 1959-60.

John D. Crow Wants To Go Or Just Quit

ST. LOUIS (AP) --John David Crow, a 29-year-old running back who has scored more touchdowns than any player in St. Louis football Cardinal history, said Wednesday he would retire if the team wouldn't trade him.

Crow said he felt that he wasn't played as much as he should have been in the 1964 National Football League season or "as much as I wanted." He was in St. Louis for a check of a knee injured in a late season game.

He left after the examination by a team physician for his home in Pine Bluff, Ark.

Crow has scored 51 touchdowns since 1958 with the Big Red--a team record--and also holds the club mark at 784 for rushing attempts. He is second in yards gained with 3,489 behind former Cardinal back Charley Trippi, who had 3,511 yards rushing.

KANSAS CITY (AP) -- Oregon State, Texas Tech, Western Kentucky and Pennsylvania were named today as the host schools for first-round games of the NCAA Basketball Championships.

First-round games will be played March 6, 8 or 9. Bernie Shively, Kentucky athletic director and tourney chairman, said first-round games in the Mideast at Western Kentucky will be March 8, but dates at the other sites haven't been selected.

Winners in the first round will advance to regionals set for March 12-13 at Maryland, Kentucky, Kansas State and Brigham Young.

The four regional champions will meet in Portland, Ore., March 19-20, to decide the NCAA crown.

Both Teams Are Undefeated In Conference Play

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- The whole bag of league marbles could be at stake Saturday when Southeast Missouri State travels to Warrensburg for a showdown game with Central Missouri State.

Both teams own clean 4-0 league slates, with six games to go. Both have won two games from other top contenders. Southeast Missouri's record includes a home win against Southwest Missouri and a road victory over Northeast Missouri, while Central has topped Northeast Missouri both at home and on the road. Both squads have overall 12-3 marks.

The game shapes up as a battle between two teams well-matched in scoring and rebounding ability. Current statistics reveal that SEMO is averaging 83-70 over all opponents, while the Mules have been averaging 76-67. Both teams have an average of ten rebounds more per game than their foes.

Guard Mike Gross of Maplewood provides the biggest scoring punch for the Indians, averaging 18.7 points per game. Center Jack Becker of St. Charles has been the main bulwark in rebounding, getting 11.3 per game. Becker is also the Indians' number - two scorer at 13.9.

For the Mules, winners of the MIAA Holiday Tournament and favorites to derail SEMO on the road to a fifth-straight league crown, flashy forward Cozel Walker is the leading scorer with an 18-point average and runner-up in rebounding with 10 per game. Walker, a transfer from Regis College in Colorado, was named Most Valuable Player in the Denver area last year.

Delta Pulls Upset On Kelly, Oran Steps On E. P.

Kelly And Delta Win In "B" Games

ORAN -- The Delta Bobcats pulled off the biggest upset yet in this years Scott-Mississippi Tournament by trouncing down Kelly 58-49. Oran showed more reasons why they were seeded number one by dropping an 85-57 bomb on the East Prairie Eagles.

KELLY 49

Delta, led by Ronnie Smith with 20 points, pulled over the Kelly Hawks 58-49. Kelly was the number two seeded team in the tourney. Delta was rightfully seeded, but apparently after last night's game it wasn't quite high enough, for they were number three.

Both teams battled the first frame to come out with a deadlocked 12-12 score. The Bobcats made their big move in the second period by dumping in 15 points while limiting Kelly to 8 to come in at the half leading 27-20.

The Hawks trying to rally, came out the third period to stuff in 16, but Delta was not to be pulled abreast of as they hit 15 to go into the final frame with a 7 point advantage. From there it was Delta.

Glen Morrow, with 16 tallies, led the Hawks. John Merrick stuffed in 10 to round out the men in double figure scoring for Kelly. Smith was the only Delta man to obtain enough to hit up in the double figures.

The Oran Eagles went out in front to stay the first period to lead by 14, 26-12. They increased their lead to an 18 point bulge as first half play ended. East Prairie never saw daylight from there.

Oran's play was blended primarily into four big pointmakers. Tom Anderson led with 22 and Robert Johnson came in second with 18. Donnie Metz and Ken Steimle each drilled 17.

Chicago Best Ever In Pennant Race

The Chicago White Sox strengthened their weak spot in acquiring catcher Johnny Romano and became a stronger American League pennant threat than ever.

Cleveland moved into the pennant contention by getting back right-handed slugger Rocky Colavito, who also figured to make the turnstiles click merrily.

Kansas City got some new faces.

That appears to sum up the three-club, eight-player deal the White Sox, Indians and Athletics announced Wednesday.

The Indians gave up Romano, pitcher Tommy John and outfielder Tommie Agee to the White Sox. Chicago sent outfielders Jim Landis and Mike Hershberger and a still unnamed pitcher to Kansas City and catcher Camilo Carreon to Cleveland. Kansas City sent Colavito to the Indians.

The unnamed new Kansas City pitcher is believed to be either veteran Johnny Buzhardt, Dave DeBusschere or rookie Fred Talbot.

The Indians, who have suffered both on the field and at the gate ever since they traded Colavito to Detroit back in 1960, not only have added right-handed hitting power which they sorely lacked, but regained one of the most popular players ever to wear an Indian uniform.

Gabe Paul estimates the Rock's presence will add at least another 150,000 to Cleveland's attendance next season. The Indians' club president also believes the 31-year-old outfielder's acquisition will make a pennant contender out of last year's sixth-place club. Despite a .274 batting average, Colavito blasted 34 home runs and drove in 102 runs.

The offer came the day after the Indians had acquired Chuck Hinton, a right-handed hitting outfielder, in a trade with Washington.

Cleveland now has four top outfielders in Colavito, Hinton, Leon Wagner and fleet center fielder Vic Davelillo. Manager Birdie Tebbetts may use Rocky at first, or switch Hinton to second, so he can employ all of his power in a balanced line-up.

A left-handed long-ball hitter, the 30-year-old backstop figures to add sock to the White Sox batting order. He hit 19 home runs despite a long layoff due to an injury. He batted .241.

Traded away by the White Sox to the Indians after the 1959 season, Romano developed into one of the league's better catchers. He was named twice to the All-Star team.

"We've been trying to get John back for two years," said White Sox Manager Al Lopez.

Lopez figures that John, a left-hander, will take up some of the southpaw slack created by the departure of left-handers Frank Baumann and Don Mossi.

It's Evansville Still On Top Small Top Ten

The state of Indiana has only one team representing it among the first 10 in The Associated Press' weekly small - college basketball poll today. But it's a mighty good one, the Evansville Aces, who show no signs of relinquishing their position as kings of their group.

Actually, the states of North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania boast the most teams in the latest top ten, two each. Texas, Louisiana and Tennessee also have one apiece.

Evansville picked up 10 first-place votes and 135 points in the balloting by 14 regional experts based on games through last Saturday. The Aces upped their record to 13-0 last week with conquests of Kentucky Wesleyan and St. Joseph's, Ind.

The top ten, with first-place votes in parentheses, and points:

"He's a daddy cat," Mother replied patiently.

"How do we know he's a daddy cat?" the boy asked.

An expectant hush fell over the bus, and the passengers listened attentively to see how Mother would handle this one. She was ready for the challenge. "He's got whiskers, hasn't he?" she said.

Nick Altrock Dies After Long Illness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nick Altrock, one of baseball's most famous funnyman, is dead at 88.

Altrock died Wednesday night after a lengthy illness. He had suffered a stroke 2½ years ago.

Once one of the American League's top pitchers, a sore arm sent Altrock into the comedy field where his zany antics captivated first the rock-ribbed baseball fans, and later, vaudeville audiences.

The showmanship first came to light when he pitched for Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast League before the turn of the century. One day, he gave up a walk and then picked off the runner.

Pleased with himself, he purposely walked seven more men during the game, picking off six of them.

As a comedian, Altrock worked first as a single, capitalizing on a shadow-boxing routine, one-man wrestling bouts, juggling and mimicry. Then the late Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Nationals, teamed him up with another clown, Al Schacht.

The two became fixtures at World Series contests and were a big drawing card for the Nats both at home and on the road.

They were headliners in vaudeville and even made a movie short in Hollywood. They feuded in the early 1930s, and although the act continued, they seldom spoke to each other.

The two were best known for their patomimes of the sports highlights of the day. They enacted the Dempsey-Firpo fight, did a takeoff on Notre Dame's Four Horsemen and made like tennis queens Suzanne Lenglen and Mary Browne.

Most of the wins came in three big seasons with the Chicago White Sox. He was 19-14 in 1904, 21-10 the following year and 20-13 in 1906.

In 1906, he helped hurl the Hitless Wonders to the American League pennant and the world championship. He was chosen over big Ed Walsh as the Chisox starter in the Series, and came through with a 2-1 victory over the rival Chicago Cubs.

Altrock and his wife have made their home in Washington since 1927, but he will be buried in Cincinnati, the city where he was born.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Boston Still Going Like They Will Not Lose

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Boston Celtics haven't lost a game since last year. The way they're going, they may not lose any until next year.

The perennial National Basketball Association champions won their 15th straight outing Wednesday night, crushing the Baltimore Bullets 131-105 with a 40-point splurge in the last quarter.

That inched the Celtics to within two of the NBA's record winning streak, and they could have the mark all to themselves by Sunday.

In other games Wednesday night, the Cincinnati Royals spurted away from the Detroit Pistons in the final five minutes to wrap up a 102-90 decision, and the Los Angeles Lakers boosted their Western Division lead to one full game over idle St. Louis with a 119-103 victory over the New York Knickerbockers.

With Oscar Robertson held to 11 points — only the second time in 16 contests he has failed to top 20 this season — Jerry Lucas took over as the Cincinnati hero. Lucas grabbed 37 rebounds to set a record for Detroit's Cobo Arena and also scored 18 points. Jack Twyman tallied 21 to pace the Royals, who twice blew 10-point leads before pulling away. Eddie Miles topped Detroit with 20 points.

Boston blew a 15-point lead when Baltimore pulled to within 91-90 as Walt Bellamy scored 16 of his 32 points in the third period for the Bullets.

But the Celtics stretched their advantage to 11 points in less than three minutes and won going away. Sam Jones scored 10 of his 34 points in the final period and John Havlicek nine of his 25. Baltimore scored only 15 points in the last quarter.

A 113-112 loss to New York last Dec. 17 is the only defeat for Boston in its last 23 games. With a 40-7 record, the Celtics have opened a 7½-game lead over Cincinnati in the Eastern Division.

The NBA record of 17 in a row was set by the old Washington Capitols in 1946-47 and tied by The Celtics in 1959-60.

John D. Crow Wants To Go Or Just Quit

ST. LOUIS (AP) --John David Crow, a 29-year-old running back who has scored more touchdowns than any player in St. Louis football Cardinal history, said Wednesday he would retire if the team wouldn't trade him.

Crow said he felt that he wasn't played as much as he should have been in the 1964 National Football League season or "as much as I wanted." He was in St. Louis for a check of a knee injured in a late season game.

He left after the examination by a team physician for his home in Pine Bluff, Ark.

Crow has scored 51 touchdowns since 1958 with the Big Red--a team record--and also holds the club mark at 784 for rushing attempts. He is second in yards gained with 3,489 behind former Cardinal back Charley Trippi, who had 3,511 yards rushing.

Smoking May Stimulate Blockage of Small Arteries

Heavy cigarette smoking may be implicated in the blockage and ultimate destruction of smaller blood vessels, particularly in the legs, a New York surgeon said today.

The possible connection between smoking habits and a condition known as peripheral atherosclerotic occlusive disease, was reported by Jere W. Lord, M. D., in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

This condition -- in essence atherosclerosis of the arteries supplying the skin and outer muscle layers -- is caused by accumulations of fatty like deposits known as plaque on the artery walls. Eventually the plaque may entirely block the flow of blood.

Since circulation is by nature the least efficient in the legs, it is here that atherosclerosis of the peripheral blood vessels is more likely to occur.

Dr. Lord, of the New York University Post - Graduate Medical School, said a study of 100 consecutive patients operated on for atherosclerotic occlusion of the peripheral blood vessels showed that 94 were heavy cigarette smokers. Of the remaining patients, four were classified as casual smokers and two were non-smokers.

"Heavy smokers" Dr. Lord defined as those who consumed a pack or more of cigarettes daily for at least 20 years. Those patients who smoked less than a pack a day or who had been smoking for less than 20 years he classified as "casual smokers."

The study was conducted among non-diabetic patients between the ages of 40 and 70. Diabetics and persons over 70 were excluded, he explained, because of the possibility that they are more susceptible to plaque formations.

Four pathways exist by which heavy cigarette smoking may contribute to atherosclerotic plaque, Dr. Lord said.

1. Tobacco may cause an allergic-type reaction in some individuals, with the arterial walls as the "target."

2. Inhaled tobacco smoke, by some as yet unexplained mechanism, is known to increase the fatty acid content of the blood. The significance of this is that fatty acids are a primary ingredient of plaque.

4. It is known that smoking stimulates the heart output instepped up blood flow, in turn, reduces the pressure exerted on arterial walls, creating a condition more favorable to plaque formation.

Some plaque formation is to be expected in older persons, Dr. Lord said, "As long as blood flows it seems inevitable that atherosclerotic lesions, not necessarily of clinical significance, will appear eventually in every human who lives into the ninth and tenth decades."

The findings of the study, however, point out that in some individuals heavy cigarette smoking may accelerate the occurrence of atherosclerotic lesions, he said. Thus obstructive arterial disease "appears at an earlier age and to a more severe degree."

In any event, Dr. Lord concluded, the study tends to make it clear that "in the non-diabetic non-smoker, atherosclerotic peripheral arterial occlusive disease is an unusual finding under the age of 70 years."

The Big Car Or Small Car: Which Safer?

By JERRY SHEEHAN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Sheehan

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Steel clashed with steel in a mighty crunch. Glass exploded and tinkled to the pavement. The Great Connecticut Car Crash had been, its promoters believed, a success.

Somebody in the state police had a suspicion that small cars—especially foreign ones—were dangerous to occupants and should be kept off the highway. He went about "proving" his thesis by pitting Detroit juggernauts against the compacts.

The results of this demolition derby caused anguish among foreign and domestic small car manufacturers. The little cars clearly came through the encounter second best.

At one point a driverless big sedan missed its mark and sped around the area like a monster seeking to turn on its master. It was captured and sent careening into its European victim.

Small car defenders yelled foul. They pointed out that the small car hand brakes had been set before the collision. This was like nailing a man's shoes to the floor before hitting him with a poleax. Also, the protective spare tire in front of rear-engined cars had been removed.

To undercut the big car-big safety theory, a Texas auto dealer flattened a luxury-sized car with a truck.

Safety experts have now stepped into the controversy in hopes of creating light instead of noise. Among them, Dr. James Malfetti of Columbia University. He concludes that "relative safety probably lies in the major use to which a car is put and in individual driving habits . . . If a crash does occur, the occupants are better off in a big car, particularly if it has collided with a small one, but the chances for staying out of an accident are better in a small car."

Dr. Malfetti, director of Columbia's Safety Education Project, added: "The composite safety difference (between big and little cars) may be so small that driving competence alone is the overriding factor."

However, Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory, Buffalo, N.Y., after a study of nearly 13,000 injury-producing car crashes, states that there is no reason to believe that small cars avoid accidents easier than large ones. There is insufficient evidence, says Cornell, to show that either big or little cars have a higher accident rate.

But the Cornell study does indicate that fatal injuries are about 50 per cent higher in little cars involved in serious accidents. And fatalities occur 30 per cent more often in medium-sized cars compared to big cars.

One possible reason may lie in the higher ejection rate of small cars—60 per cent more frequent. And risk of injury, say the experts, is twice as great if one is flying through the air rather than riding out a crash in the disintegrating vehicle.

Dr. B. J. Campbell head of the Cornell Laboratory Accident Crash Program, is quick to point out that any disadvantages of smaller cars "can be offset by applying existing techniques of auto safety."

This means seat belts, chest harnesses, door safety latches, padded dash boards, dished steering wheels and the rest of the small items of highway existence which have been proved effective in saving life and limb.

Most American and foreign companies now are either supplying seat belts as standard equipment or building in the anchors for them at the assembly line.

For reasons known only to auto makers, very few cars are equipped with seat belt-chest harness combinations. This rig, standard on the Swedish Volvo, for example, has been shown far superior to the seat belt alone in times of abrupt stops or crashes.

Still no strides have been made in the United States in investigating the merits of yellow headlights for all cars. They have been proven less glaring to oncoming drivers. Renault alone is studying the safety factors of yellow lights, which are used in France.

A suggestion by a safety expert that green rear lights be considered as a means of making some order out of the chaos of night driving apparently has been ignored by the industry.

Although some authorities, such as the National Safety Council, are quick to blame excessive speed for a large proportion of accidents, other voices have called for a re-appraisal of existing speed limits. Perhaps speed limits should be increased in some areas, they argue, to cut down on accidents.

The big car-small car controversy is not likely to find quick resolution. The job of staying alive on the nation's roads is a complicated one.

Make Coffee Cups Sparkle

Polly

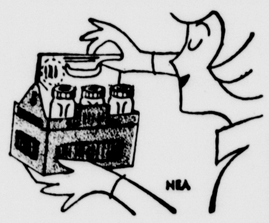
DEAR POLLY—Some of my coffee cups are not stain-resistant. Coffee breaks added up to a lot of scrubbing until started to use the stained cups to measure bleach on wash day, a different cup each time. Now my cups sparkle and I do not need anything extra to measure the bleach.—ANNE

DEAR POLLY—I have a tip straight from my washer repair man for those of you whose automatic washers empty directly into the laundry tubs. Fasten an old nylon stocking securely to the end of the water exhaust hose. You will be amazed at the amount of lint the stocking will trap that otherwise would have gone into, and eventually stopped up, the tub drain.

Refilling a salt shaker that must be inverted and filled at the bottom can be messy. Before tipping the shaker to remove the plug, fit a small pieces of pliable plastic wrap tightly over the TOP and secure it with a rubber band. You will find it fits so closely that only a few grain of salt escape and they stay in the wrap instead of spilling on the table or floor.

My pre-school daughter and I give any magazines about to be discarded a thorough check. With our respective scissors, she cuts out such things as color pictures of room settings and large objects with simple outlines and I clip the more complicated pictures that appeal to her. These cutouts are filed away in an old manila folder. When a rainy day rolls around, she gets them out and can play "store" with the food and household articles, "doll house" with the room settings and anything else her fertile imagination decrees. —JAN

DEAR POLLY—My baby's formula bottles were always falling over in the refrigerator until I started putting them in an empty soft drink carton which holds them upright.—NANCY



DEAR POLLY—I have a good quick way to cover a wire coat hanger so there is no danger of rust getting on clothes. Take a piece of soft plastic wrap that will stick to itself and tear off a piece a bit larger than the coat hanger. Lay the hanger on it and fold the two top corners over the hangers and cover completely. It stays on and lasts indefinitely.—HAZEL

Pumps In Six Million American Homes Obsolete

Better than half the pumps that power water supplies from private wells in this country need replacing, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

The Bureau points out that this does not mean the pumps mentioned are worn out — at least, not in all cases. Rather, it's a reflection of the tremendous increase in water usage by the average family — usage that has outgrown the ability of older pumps to maintain capacity and pressure.

What's behind this "spurt" in water use? For one thing, families are bigger. But more than that is the increased number of water-using appliances and devices being installed today. Automatic washing machines, dishwashers, food waste disposers, extra baths and showers, swimming pools — these are just a few of the many new demands on the family water supply.

The increased demand upon the average private well has accounted for a "water-strangulation" situation in millions of suburban and rural homes. Pumps and water systems that once were adequate can no longer keep up with family demands.

The only real answer to the problem, says the Bureau, is a new water system, designed with sufficient capacity and pressure to handle peak loads and maximum requirements.

While there is an initial investment involved, the savings in operating costs of a properly-sized pump are considerable. It runs for shorter periods, cuts down on wear, and still provides continuous full water pressure for all requirements.

Milk-An Adequate Supply

About half of all the milk deliveries in the nation last year -- 53.8 billion pounds -- was sold under the Federal milk marketing order program, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

What does this mean to consumers? Perhaps most important, the milk marketing order program means an adequate supply of fresh, wholesome milk. In other words -- the milk you want when you want it -- and at a relatively stable price.

Milk, like most foods, has a "season", a time when it is more noticeably plentiful. And there was a time when the price and supply varied with milk's season.

Under the milk marketing orders, administered by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, more orderly marketing is assured. Based essentially on supply and demand in a certain area, these orders establish a minimum price that dealers must pay for milk from dairy farmers.

Consumers, incidentally, have a say in this, too. Consumers are represented, as well as farmers and dealers, at public hearings held both before such an area is established and occasionally afterward to consider modifications.

There are 77 such milk marketing orders in operation, 34 in the Midwest. They cover milk sold by about 172,000 dairy farmers to dealers who supplied about 2/3 of the total non-farm population of the U. S. last year.

Make Coffee Cups Sparkle

Polly

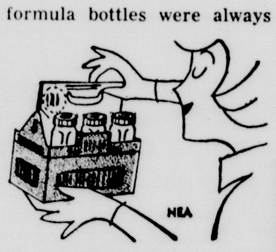
DEAR POLLY—Some of my coffee cups are not stain-resistant. Coffee breaks added up to a lot of scrubbing until started to use the stained cups to measure bleach on wash day, a different cup each time. Now my cups sparkle and I do not need anything extra to measure the bleach.—ANNE

DEAR POLLY—I have a tip straight from my washer repair man for those of you whose automatic washers empty directly into the laundry tubs. Fasten an old nylon stocking securely to the end of the water exhaust hose. You will be amazed at the amount of lint the stocking will trap that otherwise would have gone into, and eventually stopped up, the tub drain.

Refilling a salt shaker that must be inverted and filled at the bottom can be messy. Before tipping the shaker to remove the plug, fit a small pieces of pliable plastic wrap tightly over the TOP and secure it with a rubber band. You will find it fits so closely that only a few grain of salt escape and they stay in the wrap instead of spilling on the table or floor.

My pre-school daughter and I give any magazines about to be discarded a thorough check. With our respective scissors, she cuts out such things as color pictures of room settings and large objects with simple outlines and I clip the more complicated pictures that appeal to her. These cutouts are filed away in an old manila folder. When a rainy day rolls around, she gets them out and can play "store" with the food and household articles, "doll house" with the room settings and anything else her fertile imagination decrees. —JAN

DEAR POLLY—My baby's formula bottles were always falling over in the refrigerator until I started putting them in an empty soft drink carton which holds them upright.—NANCY



DEAR POLLY—I have a good quick way to cover a wire coat hanger so there is no danger of rust getting on clothes. Take a piece of soft plastic wrap that will stick to itself and tear off a piece a bit larger than the coat hanger. Lay the hanger on it and fold the two top corners over the hangers and cover completely. It stays on and lasts indefinitely.—HAZEL

Pumps In Six Million American Homes Obsolete

Better than half the pumps that power water supplies from private wells in this country need replacing, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

The Bureau points out that this does not mean the pumps mentioned are worn out — at least, not in all cases. Rather, it's a reflection of the tremendous increase in water usage by the average family — usage that has outgrown the ability of older pumps to maintain capacity and pressure.

What's behind this "spurt" in water use? For one thing, families are bigger. But more than that is the increased number of water-using appliances and devices being installed today. Automatic washing machines, dishwashers, food waste disposers, extra baths and showers, swimming pools — these are just a few of the many new demands on the family water supply.

The increased demand upon the average private well has accounted for a "water-strangulation" situation in millions of suburban and rural homes. Pumps and water systems that once were adequate can no longer keep up with family demands.

The only real answer to the problem, says the Bureau, is a new water system, designed with sufficient capacity and pressure to handle peak loads and maximum requirements.

While there is an initial investment involved, the savings in operating costs of a properly-sized pump are considerable. It runs for shorter periods, cuts down on wear, and still provides continuous full water pressure for all requirements.

Milk-An Adequate Supply

About half of all the milk deliveries in the nation last year -- 53.8 billion pounds -- was sold under the Federal milk marketing order program, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

What does this mean to consumers? Perhaps most important, the milk marketing order program means an adequate supply of fresh, wholesome milk. In other words -- the milk you want when you want it -- and at a relatively stable price.

Milk, like most foods, has a "season", a time when it is more noticeably plentiful. And there was a time when the price and supply varied with milk's season.

Under the milk marketing orders, administered by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, more orderly marketing is assured. Based essentially on supply and demand in a certain area, these orders establish a minimum price that dealers must pay for milk from dairy farmers.

Consumers, incidentally, have a say in this, too. Consumers are represented, as well as farmers and dealers, at public hearings held both before such an area is established and occasionally afterward to consider modifications.

There are 77 such milk marketing orders in operation, 34 in the Midwest. They cover milk sold by about 172,000 dairy farmers to dealers who supplied about 2/3 of the total non-farm population of the U. S. last year.

LBJ Aim: Spur Economic Freedom in Red Satellites

BY RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) President Johnson has two aims in "exploring ways to increase peaceful trade" with Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union as announced in his State of the Union message.

FIRST AIM—TO GIVE Eastern European countries more options in deciding what to do domestically and internationally.

State Department advisers say commercial expansion with the West will enable Eastern European nations to develop themselves economically along lines not approved by the Soviet Union. These men argue that the more economically independent these lands become, the more they will be able to decide things in their own national interest rather than be forced to act solely in the interests of Soviet Russia.

NEITHER WHITE HOUSE nor State Department advisers expect trade expansion will turn Eastern European satellites away from communism.

But there is some hope here that (as in the case of Red China and the Soviet Union) the Communist countries will not always see alike on all issues. It will be helpful, officials feel, if in such cases the Eastern European countries know they can vote their own interests without fear they'll be strangled by Moscow.

The U.S. trade drive will be aimed principally at Romania, Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria. East Germany will be excluded. American officials see no advantage in building relations with the East Germans.

Of late, the Eastern European countries have been feuding with the Russians over their domestic economic development. Moscow had a master plan whereby the satellites would produce for the Soviet bloc. They would not be allowed independent industrial-economic development. Instead, they would turn out the things the Red bloc needed, buy from and sell to Russia or each other in the quantities and at the prices the Russians decided.

This program kept Eastern European living standards low. It angered Eastern European leaders, including many native Communists, who wanted to develop their own countries in their own way. Some satellites began to build up domestic industry along national lines and to seek foreign trade with the West to bolster that industry.

SECOND AIM—TO BROADEN the economic thinking in both Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, to encourage their current slow, timid steps toward interest, profits, competition and other capitalistic ideas.

The Johnson program is a gamble, of course. In encouraging commerce and economic deals in which U. S. companies sell their know-how (with Export-Import Bank credits) to Red nations, the United States is taking the calculated risk of strengthening the economies of the Red regimes.

This gamble is somewhat the same as the gamble the United States has taken over many years in helping Yugoslavia. There is disagreement whether that U.S. aid has been profitable or unprofitable to U.S. interests. 1-7-65

Much Accomplished Between Inauguration Ceremonies

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the long view, what was accomplished between President John F. Kennedy's inauguration four years ago and President Johnson's Wednesday may not seem much. But there was progress.

Kennedy had no illusions when he took office Jan. 20, 1961, about what could be done, for he said: The problems facing the nation might not be solved "in our lifetime." Johnson hasn't set a timetable, either.

That he intends to push is clear. He has already hit Congress with major programs before it is back at work a month. He has promised to go overseas as part of his search for solutions, as Kennedy did.

But Kennedy apparently got more done, sitting in the White House, than by his travels. It was there he arranged the limited nuclear test-ban treaty and made the showdown decision on the Cuban missile crisis.

Johnson, remembering that and some of the emptiness of President Dwight D. Eisenhower's trips, can have no illusions about the magic of summit meetings.

In any four-year period a thousand events mushroom into headlines. When time blows the clouds away just a few can be discerned as major achievements. Two were outstanding in foreign affairs: The limited test-ban treaty and the missile crisis. But there were ominous events, too.

The treaty, signed by the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union, made the world healthier to live in. But neither France nor Red China, both on the road to nuclear power, signed.

Since China had its first atomic explosion last year, the speed of its progress in this field is menacing by itself, even though for some years it may not have deliverable weapons.

When Kennedy forced Premier Khrushchev to take his missiles out of Cuba, he left no doubt, if the Russians had any, this country would go to war if necessary. Then American-Soviet relations improved, tensions eased.

On the debit side the American-backed war in Viet Nam against communism was dwindling in chaos. This had its own somber implications. A Communist victory may end with Red China running all Southeast Asia in time.

The NATO alliance was getting rickety when Kennedy took over. This hasn't improved. The United Nations got itself into the ludicrous position of arguing over its members' obligations, particularly the Soviet Union's, to pay their dues.

There were two major achievements at home from the joint effort of two presidents and Congress.

Kennedy had sought approval of four programs above all: An $11.5-billion tax cut, biggest in history; a civil rights bill, strongest in this century; federal aid to education; medical care for the aged through Social Security.

He got none of them through Congress but his successor, Johnson, pushed hard and got the first two. This year Congress had hardly returned before he told them he wants the other two. And he may get them.

No less significant in these past four years, although less tangible, was the voters' rejection of Sen. Barry Goldwater's particular brand of conservatism and their approval of the much more moderate Johnson.

Since this was the first time in at least a generation the voters had such a clear-cut choice between those two schools of thought and government, the direction in this country seems clear for years:

A continuation of the Kennedy-Johnson kind of foreign policy and the increasing role of the government in American life, particularly in taking a greater responsibility for the general welfare, with all that means.

Kerchief Hats Are Hits

Period Design Not Enhanced By Old-Fashioned Radiators

Professional decorators tell us that a piece or two of Victorian or other period furnishings may be blended successfully with a contemporary theme.

Maybe so, but the advice sure doesn't apply to old-fashioned radiators that date back to guest parlor days. These antique heating units are an eyesore in any setting and should be replaced as one of the first steps in redecorating a home.

The Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau recommends convectors as a highly satisfactory replacement for old-time radiators. The changeover can be made by a qualified heating contractor with a minimum of inconvenience to the homeowner, since convectors are installed with the same piping connections used by the radiators.

Here's how a convector works. Supplied with hot boiler water, it draws air in a bottom opening, heats it and sends it out a top opening. Operating in this manner, convectors blanket outside walls and windows with warm air, shutting out cold and blocking drafts.

It has a definite advantage over other heating methods, since half of the heat provided is convected, half radiant -- radiant being the sunshine-like variety that emits warm rays. Heating engineers consider such a convection - radiation balance ideal.

Neatness is another of the desirable features of modern convectors. The cabinet enclosure presents a smooth, attractive front, broken only by openings at the top and bottom. * Painted to match room decor, they are a practical and efficient improvement over any "radiator relic."

No less significant in these past four years, although less tangible, was the voters' rejection of Sen. Barry Goldwater's particular brand of conservatism and their approval of the much more moderate Johnson.

Since this was the first time in at least a generation the voters had such a clear-cut choice between those two schools of thought and government, the direction in this country seems clear for years:

A continuation of the Kennedy-Johnson kind of foreign policy and the increasing role of the government in American life, particularly in taking a greater responsibility for the general welfare, with all that means.

Kerchief Hats Are Hits

Period Design Not Enhanced By Old-Fashioned Radiators

Professional decorators tell us that a piece or two of Victorian or other period furnishings may be blended successfully with a contemporary theme.

Maybe so, but the advice sure doesn't apply to old-fashioned radiators that date back to guest parlor days. These antique heating units are an eyesore in any setting and should be replaced as one of the first steps in redecorating a home.

The Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau recommends convectors as a highly satisfactory replacement for old-time radiators. The changeover can be made by a qualified heating contractor with a minimum of inconvenience to the homeowner, since convectors are installed with the same piping connections used by the radiators.

Here's how a convector works. Supplied with hot boiler water, it draws air in a bottom opening, heats it and sends it out a top opening. Operating in this manner, convectors blanket outside walls and windows with warm air, shutting out cold and blocking drafts.

It has a definite advantage over other heating methods, since half of the heat provided is convected, half radiant -- radiant being the sunshine-like variety that emits warm rays. Heating engineers consider such a convection - radiation balance ideal.

ABOUT OUR SCHOOLS
by LYNN TWITTY

In an attempt to keep the content of courses and method of instruction as nearly current as possible and to thereby better meet the needs of our students, we try, when applicable, to make revisions in all areas of teaching. The Business Education Department is being reorganized with the aim of making the department more vocational in nature than it presently is. Beginning next year we expect to enroll students choosing business education in two hours blocks of time rather than the one hour class presently being offered and they may choose the following areas, each of which will be taught on a two hour basis: Secretarial Training; Office Training; Bookkeeping; Clerical and Accounting and Business Management and Sales for Small Businesses. Within these two hour blocks of time they will receive the necessary instruction in typing, shorthand, busines machines, bookkeeping etc., designed for the particular occupational aim which each student has. We think the course in Business Management and Sales for Small Businesses especially important as the proprietorship, ownership or management of small businesses is still one of our greatest occupational fields. In fact there are four and one half million businesses in the United States at the present time and the turnover, and consequently occupational opportunity, is high because of retirement, change of management into another or larger business, etc.

We hope to keep our content and teaching methods as nearly parallel to business needs as possible and expect to work with all local businessmen who will cooperate with us in making our teaching effective.

If arrangements can be made, some of our students will be placed for "on the job training" in cooperating businesses while still enrolled in school. This would be on a part time basis and the cooperating businessmen could provide instruction and experience to the student which would be impossible for us to provide in a classroom situation. On the other hand, we could teach those basic skills which the business employee must have in order to perform his job effectively.

Early in this century a remarkable Italian lady, Dr. Maria Montessori, founded a method of teaching which had a very considerable impact on education in a number of nations and especially in the United States. Her methods, with some revision, are again appearing in a number of schools in the United States and more especially in private schools where parents of the students think it particularly valuable.

Many of the ideas developed by Dr. Montessori have become a part of the instruction used by most teachers and are generally well known. The teaching pays attention to the child rather than vice versa. The child proceeds at his own rate in an environment controlled to provide the means of learning. The heart of the process is the use of imaginative teaching materials. Each of these is self-correcting thus allowing the child to proceed at his own rate and to find his own mistakes. Programmed learning in use in many of our schools, as it is to some extent here in Sikeston, is an outgrowth of this idea. The involvement of the child's muscles and all senses in the learning process is used. The child feels, sees, tastes, hears in order to make his learning more meaningful, lasting and effective.

The inside of the true Montessori classroom sometimes looks pretty much like "controlled chaos" with each child working at the particular learning activity he has chosen. It is best adapted to very small class size and for that reason is somewhat difficult to use in the public school. However, the imaginative teacher will always use some of the methods developed by Dr. Montessori to make the learning process as exciting and meaningful as possible. Every teacher should be familiar with the theories and methods of all types of education. Parents as well can do more for their children if they have some familarity with the various learning processes.

We can pretty nearly solve the drop out problem when we make school as exciting, interesting and as much fun as it is to stay out of school.

We visited a large metropolitan school system a few days ago where most of the school buses were operated by women drivers. Apparently these lady drivers were doing an excellent job. Their supervisor said that they were capable, kept good schedules and apparently had no more disciplinary or control problems than did the men drivers. His comment was that student control depended almost entirely on the driver, and we would add to this that the same thing is true in the classroom. Competent teachers, like competent drivers, have little trouble with discipline.

The supervisor of the system we are referring to said that, as might be expected, the women drivers usually kept their buses cleaner than did the men.

We have, in my opinion, a highly competent corps of school bus drivers here in Sikeston. They do a good job in getting our children to and from school and their safety record is almost perfect. We think they would be difficult to beat but we suspect that we have competent women in the community who could also do a good job driving our buses if the occasion ever arose.

You Can Speak Spanish In 24 Hours

Quiere usted hablar Espanol? If you have wanted to speak Spanish, but have always shied away from the tedious hours of study required, then Spanish SPEED SPEECH, which was developed by William Archer, is for you. This amazingly fast, new technique can put anyone on the road to Spanish proficiency in only 24 hours of concentrated study. You will be pleased to know that there are no complicated verb conjugations or lengthy vocabulary to memorize. You start learning to speak Spanish immediately!

William Archer, the creator of SPEED SPEECH, has heard the phrase "ugly American" many times, while traveling abroad. Mr. Archer has talked personally with the peoples of many countries, and he has heard the words -- indifferent, impolite, hostile, offensive -- used much too often in describing the American people. The most basic step in understanding the people of any country is to understand their language. Learn to speak Spanish this amazing new way -- it takes only 24 hours.

Spanish SPEED SPEECH is available only through The Daily Sikeston Standard. Since it is being offered as a public service to our readers, we are able to give you the textbook at considerable savings by following these simple instructions: 1. Send the easy order blank, which will appear in The Daily Sikeston Standard several times each week. This entitles you to a total savings of $2.00 on the textbook. 2. Mail the order blank and a check or money order for $3.04, payable to The Daily Sikeston Standard.

Lightest Mexico

By John Abney

Merida, Mexico -- Jetted in here today on a Mexican Aviation Company (CMA) Comet to see how the Texans of Mexico are making out. This being the comparison many Mexicans make with the people of Yucatan.

Yucatan considers itself a sort of republic like they do in Texas," the travel gentleman in Mexico City said.

The reason for this notion is that Yucatan is surrounded by the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean on three sides. The fourth frontier is heavy jungles and no roads.

A few years ago the only way you could get here was by pint sized steamers from Veracruz, that wallowed across the Gulf to Campeche or Progreso.

CMA hooked Merida up by air and the government pushed through a good highway and railroads.

The CMA Comet makes it from Mexico City in 90 minutes for $44 US.

Merida hasn't changed much in the past few centuries. It is clean, colonial and different from the rest of Mexico. Plush hotels now dot the city but living has held its same easy pace.

The Hotel Merida has 110 air conditioned rooms and suites. The newest and most elegant here. A classy swimming pool where the clients lounge in the sun to contemplate the historical past in the midst of modern culture.

They serve it with onion rings in tacos, heaped on platters or in tortas -- sandwiches made of hard rolls.

Another favorite dish -- mine, too -- is jokingly called "papas azules." I think the real name is papat dzul. This consists of chicken tacos with a blue-green sauce made of ground pumpkin seeds.

Much of the food dates back to the Maya days and you don't find it in other parts of the country unless a Yucateco sets up his own restaurant somewhere else.

And the chief industry around here is henequen, a sisal-fiber that comes from a spiked cactus plant. They use it for making ropes, baskets and hats. Panama hats, incidentally, are made here in large quantities.

Merida is the center of operations for visits to the ruins of the great Maya empire at Chichen Itza, Kabah and the more recently discovered set at Dzibil Chaltun.

Apparently the Maya Indians specialized in devising names like these as well as building fabulous cities. They had a high rolling civilization more than a thousand years ago when a lot of Europeans were still running around in wolf hide underwear.

Another curious feature of this interesting world is the lay of the land. It is flat, flat, flat and a bump three feet high is considered a mountain.

Also, I have never seen a surface river in Yucatan. They are all underground due to something about the geological age or some such. Seems rather complicated but they pump streams and Merida is happy with this arrangement.

Everything is pleasant and colonial and the trade winds keep the evening cool. Moderately priced, too. Even though the tourists have discovered Merida and come flocking in from all points these days.

William Archer, the creator of SPEED SPEECH, has heard the phrase "ugly American" many times, while traveling abroad. Mr. Archer has talked personally with the peoples of many countries, and he has heard the words -- indifferent, impolite, hostile, offensive -- used much too often in describing the American people. The most basic step in understanding the people of any country is to understand their language. Learn to speak Spanish this amazing new way -- it takes only 24 hours.

Spanish SPEED SPEECH is available only through The Daily Sikeston Standard. Since it is being offered as a public service to our readers, we are able to give you the textbook at considerable savings by following these simple instructions: 1. Send the easy order blank, which will appear in The Daily Sikeston Standard several times each week. This entitles you to a total savings of $2.00 on the textbook. 2. Mail the order blank and a check or money order for $3.04, payable to The Daily Sikeston Standard.

Of all the passions, jealousy is that which exacts the hardest service, and pays the bitterest wages.

Charles Caleb Colton

Hours late, the husband staggered into the living room. His wife was furious when he handed her his empty pay envelope.

"Where's your pay?" she stormed.

"Bought something for the housh."

"Like what?"

"Like ten rounds of drinks."

Lightest Mexico

By John Abney

Merida, Mexico -- Jetted in here today on a Mexican Aviation Company (CMA) Comet to see how the Texans of Mexico are making out. This being the comparison many Mexicans make with the people of Yucatan.

Yucatan considers itself a sort of republic like they do in Texas," the travel gentleman in Mexico City said.

The reason for this notion is that Yucatan is surrounded by the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean on three sides. The fourth frontier is heavy jungles and no roads.

A few years ago the only way you could get here was by pint sized steamers from Veracruz, that wallowed across the Gulf to Campeche or Progreso. CMA hooked Merida up by air and the government pushed through a good highway and railroads.

The CMA Comet makes it from Mexico City in 90 minutes for $44 US.

Merida hasn't changed much in the past few centuries. It is clean, colonial and different from the rest of Mexico. Plush hotels now dot the city but living has held its same easy pace.

The Hotel Merida has 110 air conditioned rooms and suites. The newest and most elegant here. A classy swimming pool where the clients lounge in the sun to contemplate the historical past in the midst of modern culture.

They serve it with onion rings in tacos, heaped on platters or in tortas -- sandwiches made of hard rolls.

Another favorite dish -- mine, too -- is jokingly called "papas azules." I think the real name is papat dzul. This consists of chicken tacos with a blue-green sauce made of ground pumpkin seeds.

Much of the food dates back to the Maya days and you don't find it in other parts of the country unless a Yucateco sets up his own restaurant somewhere else.

And the chief industry around here is henequen, a sisal-fiber that comes from a spiked cactus plant. They use it for making ropes, baskets and hats. Panama hats, incidentally, are made here in large quantities.

Merida is the center of operations for visits to the ruins of the great Maya empire at Chichen Itza, Kabah and the more recently discovered set at Dzibil Chaltun.

Apparently the Maya Indians specialized in devising names like these as well as building fabulous cities. They had a high rolling civilization more than a thousand years ago when a lot of Europeans were still running around in wolf hide underwear.

Another curious feature of this interesting world is the lay of the land. It is flat, flat, flat and a bump three feet high is considered a mountain.

Also, I have never seen a surface river in Yucatan. They are all underground due to something about the geological age or some such. Seems rather complicated but they pump streams and Merida is happy with this arrangement.

Everything is pleasant and colonial and the trade winds keep the evening cool. Moderately priced, too. Even though the tourists have discovered Merida and come flocking in from all points these days.

I will restore health unto thee.—(Jer. 30:17).

If we seek it in earnest prayer God's radiant life will fill us through and through and help to heal the ills that may betake us. By acknowledging that He is the Spirit of health and perfection we can more easily put aside any ideas that disease cannot be cured.

Thank you for sending the Sikeston Standard to me. I enjoy the paper from the hometown. Norman Tucker was my late husband who done trucking in Sikeston. My children finished school at the Sikeston high school. The three boys, Bill, Charles and Brent all working now in Flint in GMC Plant of automobiles. The daughter, Hattie Worley, she and her husband are in the ministery in Bakersfield, Mo. We had many wonderful friends in Sikeston. If you want to put this in the mail box letters you may.

March of Dimes Tot Fights Back

FINDING THE WAY

Wisdom of Faith

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

There is a famous prayer that can be uplifted each day:

"Lord, give me the serenity to accept what cannot be changed,
Give me the courage to change what ought to be changed,
And the wisdom to know the difference."

Attributed to the eminent theologian, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, this prayer opens life to those twins of serenity and courage that merge into wisdom.

Any one of us has an inventory of personal or social problems to demand both this serenity and the courage. At the risk of oversimplification but in the hope of "priming the pump," here are a few:

"Lord, give me the serenity to accept": The difficult fact of myself. That's a demanding discipline. Too many persons live through their lives without ever really determining actually making their faith articulate. The guilt-ridden can't forgive themselves; and the cynical won't even confront themselves.

"Lord give me the serenity to accept": Today. Many persons who are unwilling to be seen in last year's clothing continue to wear last century's values. Only those who have the serenity to accept the fact that they live in the "Now" can claim the grace to live serenely in the most demanding of circumstances.

"Lord give me the grace to accept": God. In a time of scientific acceleration and knowledge-explosion, our ideas of God may have been too small BUT He is greater than our ideas. To accept God is to understand that a man can know the power of God which creates the godly.

"Give me the courage to change": Apathy. That sin which permits men to get accustomed to ugliness, to corruption, or to a divided humanity is the yawn of the cynic. In every town there is a need to pray for the courage to rout apathy.

"Give me the courage to change": Hopelessness. In an age of many things there is also the loss of pride in craftsmanship. Too many are willing to settle for getting by instead of knowing the inner drive which demands the yearning for excellence. When great reverences are treated casually, there is an air of hopelessness which settles on the human race.

"Give me the courage to change": Fear. It's a strange fear that immobilizes so many. John Ciardi once said: "We are so afraid of going broke that we're afraid to go for broke."

"And the wisdom to know the difference": That's the faith and trust that enables a man to know that nothing can separate him from the love of God. Either we are tools of the Almighty or we are pawns of the dreadful. Today we pray for this God-given serenity, courage and wisdom.

THE Outlook for Business

MERCHANDISING
Austin T. Cushman Chairman of the Board
Sears, Roebuck and Co.

This panel has been asked to appraise prospective business conditions through mid-1965. I am glad our assignment stops at midyear, for obviously the further ahead one has to project, the greater the potential risk of error becomes. This is particularly true this year now that we have behind us 45 months of recovery from the low point of the previous business downturn in early 1961.

As I look into the first half of 1965, I see on balance continued good retail sales. In the first two months we will still be getting the benefit of the tax cut which was effective March 1, 1964. We will, of course, miss the extra business day which Leap Year provided in 1964. In April, there may be a little hesitation. The current withholding tax rates for many families are not sufficient to meet full income tax obligations and some thousands of households will find it necessary to "ante up" an additional amount to square their accounts. But this will be only temporary.

By far, however, the most important consideration is the fact that more people are at work than ever before, the majority with high and rising incomes. We seem to have a national obsession to talk about unemployment and sometimes look at this side of the coin so closely that we fail to turn it over and look at the other side. I do not mean to belittle the unemployment problem nor underestimate the personal suffering involved for those unemployed who really need and want to work. The latest figures indicate that 3,373,000 persons, equal to 5.0 per cent of the labor force were unemployed in mid-November. A little comfort can be taken from the fact that this total numbers nearly 600,000 fewer than last year.

But let us look at the positive side. There are now 70,793,000 persons gainfully employed; nearly 1,500,000 more than a year ago. There has been fuller employment this year for those at work, a longer workweek, and more overtime. Meanwhile, wages and salaries for a wide variety of jobs, both white collar and blue collar, continue their year-to-year advance to higher levels. Latest figures on total wage and salary income show it to be running at a $337 billion annual rate, an increase of $19 billion over 1963.

I conclude that we retailers have another good season ahead of us. We may have to work a little harder to be heroes in 1965 than was necessary in 1964. This will be particularly true for that bottom line on the profit and loss statement. But unless a deteriorating foreign situation drastically alters consumer psychology, the retailers of the nation should be able to add another four or five per cent increase in spring 1965 to the healthy gains already secured in 1964.

Why is it that we rejoice at a birth and grieve at a funeral? It is because we are not the person involved. -- Mark Twain.

How America Had a Ball

BUCHANAN
History's most lavish.

JOHNSON

HARDING

By JERRY KLEIN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The ghosts of George Washington wearing black velvet and diamonds, Woodrow Wilson forbidding an inaugural ball as "frivolous" and William Henry Harrison killing himself delivering an 8,000-word-long Inaugural Address, all will be among the invisible audience at the Capitol Jan. 20.

As Lyndon Johnson is sworn in as their successor to the nation's highest office they may reflect how dramatically inaugurals have changed.

Washington may admire LBJ for deciding to break custom and wear a plain business suit for the ceremony. The father of his country never felt comfortable in the fancy dress and varnished shoes his advisers felt dignity required, but apparently Washington tried to make up for this flamboyance by giving the shortest inaugural address, just 134 words.

On Wednesday evening some 20,000 persons are expected to attend a series of inaugural balls, a tradition begun by James Madison in 1809 (when only 400 turned up). His predecessor, Jefferson, had disapproved of a ball because it "smacked of royalty."

Similar celebrations were ruled out by Franklin Roosevelt, Hoover, Coolidge, Harding and Wilson, perhaps sensing America's coming involvement in war, said such a ball would be "somewhat frivolous in the face of the solemn responsibility assumed in taking office as president."

President Johnson's inaugural speech will probably follow his "jest-plain-folks" style and be of moderate length. It took about an hour for Harrison to get off the 8,578-worder prepared for him by Daniel Webster—enough time for him to get chilled and die of pneumonia within the month.

Inaugural addresses have varied in quality as well as quantity, of course. The one Abraham Lincoln delivered at his second swearing-in ("with malice toward none") has become a classic of spoken literature, though it was one of the shortest: just 588 words. John Kennedy's, too, will probably bulk important in history.

But Harding's speech was so full of "incomprehensible polysyllables" that literary critic H. L. Mencken said it possessed the "style of a rhinoceros liberating himself by main strength from a lake of boiling molasses." Harding had "tortured" the American language, charged Mencken, and put it "to cruel and unusual uses."

Inaugural speeches have been used to set the tone and thrust of the new administration. But strangely, there were four chief executives who delivered no addresses at all. Presidents Tyler, Fillmore Johnson and Arthur were vice presidents who succeeded to the higher office through death. But since none was elected in his own right, none ever got the chance to make an inaugural speech.

It will be some time before the total bill for the 1965 inauguration comes in, but no doubt it will run into the hundreds of thousands. Just to erect reviewing stands around the White House cost about $100,000 these days. Though when Zachary Taylor was sworn in they cost $200 and the carpenters were glad to be earning $1.50 a day.

This inaugural crowd will no doubt be well behaved. Yet the White House reception given for Lincoln was so disorderly it seemed that "a regiment of troops had been quartered there with permission to forage."

The public was so unruly following Jackson's swearing-in that they left the White House virtually in tatters. Afterward, Jackson and his vice president, John Calhoun, had trouble finding enough unbroken china on which to have dinner.

At Ulysses S. Grant's inaugural reception, jewels were stolen from ladies' gowns and the guests' clothing was mixed up that next morning so some 800 "frantic" people were still milling around trying to locate their hats and coats.

One of the most lavish banquets ever to follow a presidential inauguration was laid for James Buchanan. A special building was erected for the party, 235 feet long, decorated in red, white and blue.

Inside was served a banquet including 400 gallons of oysters, 500 quarts of chicken salad, 1,200 quarts of ice cream, 500 quarts of jelly, 60 saddles of mutton, four saddles of venison, 75 hams and 125 tongues.

The event, it is said, was long remembered.

Patterson Again Chairman, Appropriations Committee

Senator J. F. Patterson, representing the 25th Senatorial District in the Missouri Senate has again been named Chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the 73rd Session of the General Assembly. This will be the third session Senator Patterson has served in this capacity. In addition to this appointment, Senator Patterson was named by Senator John Joynt of St. Louis Second District, President Pro Tem to membership on nine other committees. They are as follows: Agriculture, Banks and Banking Economics and Major Expenditures, Insurance, Legislative Research, Roads and Highways, Rules and Joint Rules and Salaries and Resolutions.

Anticipating his reappointment as Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Senator Patterson assisted the then Governor Elect Warren Hearnes and the budget staff in the preparation of the budget during November and December of last year. The emergency or deficiency appropriation bill has already been introduced in the House where hearings are currently being held. This bill should reach the Senate the first week in February and Senator Patterson will then begin the Senate Committee Hearings. The regular appropriation bills have been introduced in the House and hearings will begin within the next three weeks by the House Appropriations Committee but they are not expected to reach the Senate before April 1st.

During the interim following the last session of the General Assembly Senator Patterson has served as a member of the State Reorganization Committee which report will be delivered to Governor Hearnes on January 25th. This committee reviewed the various departments assigned to the Executive Branch of the state government and is making recommendations to the governor and General Assembly on legislative matters to be considered in this session.

For the past several months Senator Patterson has been working as vice-president in charge of public relations for Mark Twain Life Insurance Company which home office is located in Jefferson City, Missouri. He serves the company from his home in Caruthersville and from the home office in Jefferson City. Persons desiring to contact Senator Patterson may reach him at his Senate office in Jefferson City, his home in Caruthersville or at the home office of Mark Twain Life Insurance office in Jefferson City.

Joynt Reapportionment Committee Chairman; Other Committee Appointments

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- Sen. John W. Joynt, D-St. Louis, has announced Sen. Omer H. Avery, D-Troy, will head the important Reapportionment Committee.

He said the 13-member committee will handle all congressional and legislative redistricting bills. They are expected to pose some of the season's toughest problems.

Bills and a constitutional amendment to carry out Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' plan for bipartisan legislative redistricting commissions already have been introduced in the Senate.

Joynt, president pro tem, named himself to head the powerful Senate Judiciary Committee. It handles more bills than any other and sometimes acts as a "graveyard" committee to bury unwanted measures.

Sen. Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, former chairman, will be a member of the Judiciary Committee this time.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, will again be appropriations chairman - his third hitch in that job.

Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, will head the Economics Committee which screens all bills involving major expenditures.

Both the Judiciary and Economics committees were heavily weighted in favor of the slim Senate majority which elected Joynt president protem over Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, who was the governor's choice for the job.

Here are the chairmen — many of them repeaters — of other major committees among the 31 appointed (all aare Democrats:

Agriculure — Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham of Columbia; Banks-Sen. Jack C. Jones of Carrollton; Conservation and parks-Sen. Blackwell; Correctional Institutions — Sen. John E. Downs of St. Joseph;

Employment Security — Sen. T. D. McNeal of St. Louis;

Industrial, Nuclear, Aviation, Space and Water Resources-Sen. John J. Johnson of St. Louis County; Insurance—Sen. Edgar J. Keating of Kansas City;

Labor—Sen. Robert A. Young of St. Louis County; local government-Sen. Maurice Schechter of Creve Coeur; Mental Health—Sen. John P. Barrett of St. Louis;

Metropolitan-Sen. Jasper M. Brancato of Kansas City; Municipal Corporations - Brancato; Public Health and Welfare—Sen. William J. Cason of Clinton;

Roads and highways — Sen. Michael Kinney of St. Louis; Salaries-Kinney; State Departments — Sen. Raymond Hopfinger of St. Louis County; Ways and means — Avery; Workmen's Compensation — Sen. Robert Pentland of St. Louis.

Language Change May Mean End of The Paulist Choir

Worshippers now sing at intervals during the Mass — a function that had been performed by priests and trained vocalists.

The Rev. Eugene F. O'Malley, 63, said Tuesday in an interview he will retire after 37 years as director of the choir, a group of men and boys.

"The liturgical reform movement, with congregational singing and English instead of Latin, seems to have made us unnecessary," Father O'Malley said.

"I doubt that the choir will continue. It's the end of an era."

Since its founding in 1904 at St. Mary's church — the city's oldest Roman Catholic congregation — the 85-voice choir has sung in most major cities of the United States, Canada and Europe.

Audiences have included Pope Pius X, Pope Pius XII, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and the late President John F. Kennedy.

The main purpose of the choir, however, has been to sing the Latin hymns and responses during Mass at St. Mary's.

Because of liturgical changes adopted by the Second Vatican Council, the last Mass to be sung in Latin at St. Mary's will be Feb. 28.

The choir, whose members range in age from 8 to 65, was founded by the Rev. William J. Finn shortly after the Paulist fathers took over St. Mary's.

Family Physician Has Key Role In Care of Mentally Retarded

The family physician today has the key role in the care and treatment of mental retardation -- a condition "fully as subtle and complicated as that of open heart surgery or organ transplants."

His responsibilities were spelled out in a report from the American Medical Association Conference on Mental Retardation appearing in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The report was compiled by Julius B. Richmond, M. D., of Syracuse, conference chairman; George E. Gardner, M.D., director of the Judge Baker Guidance Clinic, Boston, and George Tarjan, M. D., superintendent and medical director of the Pacific State Hospital, Pomona, Calif.

"In terms of magnitude," they said, "mental retardation is the most handicapping of all childhood disorders.

"Approximately five million individuals diagnosed at some time in their lives as retarded now live in the United States and some 126,000 more are born yearly. A much larger number probably function ineffectively throughout life, though never identified."

And yet, said the conference leaders, perhaps 50 per cent of the cases of mental retardation are preventable.

With major infections being conquered, with many metabolic and nutritional disorders brought under relatively effective control, "the physician is at last permitted the time and energy necessary to develop the sophistication he must have in order to grapple effectively on a clinical level with this disorder." The report itself is intended to serve as a handbook on mental retardation and will be widely distributed to physicians and medical schools.

It delineates the latest knowledge concerning prevention, diagnosis and treatment; lists facilities and services necessary to provide maximum help for the retarded child; offers suggestions for helping the retarded child's family meet their problems, and defines some of the research and education problems which must be solved in coming to grips with retardation.

The report also seeks to encourage new and more rewarding methods of care at the community level where, it is felt, best results can be anticipated. These methods, however, require new facilities, new planning and new organization so that comprehensive, as opposed to piecemeal, care can be provided.

It is not enough, the report pointed out, that physicians be well informed and well organized to cope with the problems of mental retardation. Communities, nationwide, must also be organized so that supporting services -- family counseling, psychological testing, special education, rehabilitation and vocational training -- are readily available for the retarded.

In other words, mental retardation is not only a medical problem, it is also an "educational and social problem of vast dimensions," the report said.

"The nation, however, also possesses a substantial reservoir of knowledge and skill in this demanding field," it continued. Could all of this knowledge be put into effective use immediately, it is estimated that as much as half of all retardation might be prevented and the lives of the remaining victims rendered more productive and fulfilled."

It has been apparent for some years, Dr. Richmond noted, that the problems of the mentally retarded have "not received adequate attention."

But interest in mental retardation is now on the upsurge, he added, stimulated by the interest of the late President John F. Kennedy, congressional appropriations for building and expanding facilities and the increased activities of voluntary organizations.

"Now, with medical progress having dealt relatively effectively with the acute disorders of childhood, the time is ripe for renewed efforts in this field," he said.

That primary physicians, rather than the specialists in mental disorders, should spearhead this effort is due to what the report termed the "particularly effective position" of the primary physician.

It is the doctor in private practice -- the general practitioner, the pediatrician, the internist -- who sees children in their first years of life.

Thus, the primary physician often has an opportunity to identify mental retardation in a child years before it might otherwise be recognized.

Early diagnosis, in turn, means early help for the retarded child when chances of reversing retardation are usually at their best.

This is particularly true in what is termed "socio-cultural retardation." In such cases, the report said, "Enrichment of the child's environment begun early enough may save the child from a lifetime handicap."

"Mental retardation now poses to the primary physician what is in essence, a more complicated medical problem than many he may have had time and resources to attack before."

But it is a problem with which the primary physician can cope by expanding his knowledge and modifying the skills and techniques he uses with all cases of chronic illness, the report added.

"The primary physician faces a new challenge in retardation, not because the problem is new but because for the first time he has the necessary time and resources with which to confront it."

Grapefruit-Orange Blended Juice

Tangerines in your blended orange-grapefruit juice? Yes, it's legal under the U.S. standards for grades of canned blended grapefruit juice and orange juice -- in limited amounts for the sake of color and flavor.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced early this month that the U.S. standards for canned, blended grapefruit and orange juice were to be amended to permit the addition of these other juices. This change in the standards became effective January 8, 1965.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, which is responsible for food grade standards, explains that the change makes the requirement for the orange juice portion of the product the same as specified for canned orange juice under standards of both USDA and the Food and Drug Administration.

Specifically the change in standards allows 10 per cent of the orange juice ingredient to consist of the juice of mandarin oranges, including tangerines. Addition of these juices in this limited amount, will help standardize the color and flavor of the grapefruit-orange blend.

In November, 1964 USDA also revised the U.S. standards for grades of canned and frozen concentrated orange juice, bringing these into line with Food and Drug Administration requirements.

USS TATTNALL (DDG-19) Jan. 12 -- Fireman Henry Hampton, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hampton of 15 W. Castor St., Dexter, Mo., participated Jan. 6-15 in an amphibious landing operation called MEDLANDEX 1-65 while serving aboard the guided destroyer USS Tattnall.

The exercise, which took place on the beaches of Porto Scudo and Cape Teulada, Sardinia, was conducted to give both Marine and fleet units training in conducting full scale amphibious operations.

During the live firing exercise, Marines landed from ships and helicopters. In the helicopter landing phase, called vertical envelopment, Marines are flown over and behind enemy lines to cut off enemy supplies and reinforcements.

Training operations of this type are conducted periodically by units of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean to insure the combat readiness of all elements of the Navy - Marine Corps team.

Family Physician Has Key Role In Care of Mentally Retarded

The family physician today has the key role in the care and treatment of mental retardation -- a condition "fully as subtle and complicated as that of open heart surgery or organ transplants."

His responsibilities were spelled out in a report from the American Medical Association Conference on Mental Retardation appearing in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The report was compiled by Julius B. Richmond, M. D., of Syracuse, conference chairman; George E. Gardner, M.D., director of the Judge Baker Guidance Clinic, Boston, and George Tarjan, M. D., superintendent and medical director of the Pacific State Hospital, Pomona, Calif.

"In terms of magnitude," they said, "mental retardation is the most handicapping of all childhood disorders.

"Approximately five million individuals diagnosed at some time in their lives as retarded now live in the United States and some 126,000 more are born yearly. A much larger number probably function ineffectively throughout life, though never identified."

And yet, said the conference leaders, perhaps 50 per cent of the cases of mental retardation are preventable.

With major infections being conquered, with many metabolic and nutritional disorders brought under relatively effective control, "the physician is at last permitted the time and energy necessary to develop the sophistication he must have in order to grapple effectively on a clinical level with this disorder." The famous Lloyd's of London sells all types of insurance except long-term life and financial guarantee. It started in 1688 as a coffee house, where Edward Lloyd began to sell insurance policies against sea losses. At one time it carried an insurance of more than 600,000 pounds on a bullion shipment from Veracruz, Mexico.

A pool outside and air conditioned comfort within are features of the Mark Twain Residence Hall for Men and Women, Columbia. The 450-resident facility adjacent to the University of Missouri's "red" campus opened last September; and its 628-resident companion, Lewis and Clark Residence Center, is nearing completion. Both centers -- the only air conditioned residence halls at the University of Missouri -- are operated by University Dormitory Development, Inc. Together, they represent a total investment in excess of $6 million.
A special attraction to organizations and associations, graduate and undergraduate students, and professional persons taking summer refresher courses, are the extensive meeting and seminar facilities provided. "We fully expect that starting this summer the Mark Twain and Lewis and Clark will become focal points for meetings of groups from 20 to 300," said Jack Wilson, manager. "and we will be prepared to meet all their requirements including food of the highest quality."
Other features of the new residence centers include built-in furniture, wardrobe closets, individual room lavatories, private tiled baths between each two rooms, individual room telephones, maid service, carpeted hall floors, floor lounges with television, high speed elevators, large main floor lounges, cafeteria dining rooms, evening snack bars, study halls, recreation and billiard rooms, automatic laundries and ample off-street parking. Lewis Hall, the new tower building for graduate students, contains a high number of single rooms to meet advanced students' requirements for greater privacy.
The Mark Twain Residence Hall is located a 515 South Fifth Street in Columbia, two blocks west of Jesse Hall. Lewis and Clark Residence Center is at 406-10 Turner Avenue, two blocks to the south of the Mark Twain.

FINDING THE WAY

Vow to Open a Door

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The crooner was singing – "Just us in a room, without windows or doors." Frankly, that doesn't sound too inviting, suggesting a cell instead of a room. And there is the old limerick:

I wish that my room had a floor.
I don't mind it not having a door;
But this walking around
Without touching the ground
Is getting to be quite a bore!

But I would be concerned if there was no door!

The challenge of this new year is discovering those doors. And then opening them.
Mankind is haunted by the number of bolted doors, areas where hope is abandoned. Think of the problems caused by totalitarian governments, or housing or racial injustice or extreme poverty and you are aware of the numbers of people who can't see a door.

What is worse there are the others who know there are doors and refuse to open them. They can tell you all of the hazards, the disappointments and the risks.
To be doorless in such a room is to be a victim of the heresy of despair. The doorless are hopeless.

To pretend that there are doors that open to easy ways by which these problems can be solved is to live in a fantasy-land.
To refuse to open the doors that are there is to be a defeatist and a cynic.
Men who collect such information, tell us that doors have many meanings. There is the old tradition in certain rural areas of painting the door blue when there were marriageable daughters at home. There are the churches with red doors. There were the doors to the castles with their great hinges of metal and their formidable look of authority. There are the glass doors that sometimes pose threats because they are confused with windows. The important fact to know is that there are doors. Personally, the most important significance of the door is "the open door."

There is a sentence at the opening of a newly published book of essays by the late Pierre Teilhard de Chardin. That distinguished scholar and priest wrote, "The whole future of the earth, as of religion, seems to me to depend on the awakening of our faith in the future." That's an open door.

Think of the differences in persons and communities when there are those who understand the meaning of the Lord who says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. To any man who opens, I will come in and sup with him." At the opening of the year, open the door!

Heating Expanded Areas Easy With Hydronic System

Family expansion often calls for home expansion. Frequently space can be provided with an addition on the house, finishing the attic, remodeling the basement or enclosing a sun porch or breezeway.
With a hydronic (hot water) heating system, there is no problem in providing this important element of expansion. Transmitting hot water through small diameter pipe or tubing, hydronic heating is so flexible that additional heat distributors can be installed wherever needed.
Most boilers have additional capacity to provide heat for extra rooms. If necessary, even more heat output can be obtained by insulating the piping, reports the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau.
With the system of circulated hot water, small pipe or tubing can be "threaded" through walls and floors to connect with baseboard heat distributors. Or, if the area is to have a slab floor, pipe coils can be imbedded to provide the comfort of radiant heat.
One of the first steps in planning home expansion is to get the advice of an experienced heating contractor. He will be glad to offer his suggestions and estimate costs for you.

Mark Twain Residence Hall At Columbia Offers Modern Conveniences and Luxury

A pool outside and air conditioned comfort within are features of the Mark Twain Residence Hall for Men and Women, Columbia. The 450-resident facility adjacent to the University of Missouri's "red" campus opened last September; and its 628-resident companion, Lewis and Clark Residence Center, is nearing completion. Both centers -- the only air conditioned residence halls at the University of Missouri -- are operated by University Dormitory Development, Inc. Together, they represent a total investment in excess of $6 million.

A special attraction to organizations and associations, graduate and undergraduate students, and professional persons taking summer refresher courses, are the extensive meeting and seminar facilities provided. "We fully expect that starting this summer the Mark Twain and Lewis and Clark will become focal points for meetings of groups from 20 to 300," said Jack Wilson, manager. "and we will be prepared to meet all their requirements including food of the highest quality."

Other features of the new residence centers include built-in furniture, wardrobe closets, individual room lavatories, private tiled baths between each two rooms, individual room telephones, maid service, carpeted hall floors, floor lounges with television, high speed elevators, large main floor lounges, cafeteria dining rooms, evening snack bars, study halls, recreation and billiard rooms, automatic laundries and ample off-street parking. Lewis Hall, the new tower building for graduate students, contains a high number of single rooms to meet advanced students' requirements for greater privacy.

The Mark Twain Residence Hall is located a 515 South Fifth Street in Columbia, two blocks west of Jesse Hall. Lewis and Clark Residence Center is at 406-10 Turner Avenue, two blocks to the south of the Mark Twain.

FINDING THE WAY

Vow to Open a Door

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The crooner was singing – "Just us in a room, without windows or doors." Frankly, that doesn't sound too inviting, suggesting a cell instead of a room. And there is the old limerick:

I wish that my room had a floor.
I don't mind it not having a door:
But this walking around
Without touching the ground
Is getting to be quite a bore!

But I would be concerned if there was no door!

The challenge of this new year is discovering those doors. And then opening them.

Mankind is haunted by the number of bolted doors, areas where hope is abandoned. Think of the problems caused by totalitarian governments, or housing or racial injustice or extreme poverty and you are aware of the numbers of people who can't see a door.

What is worse there are the others who know there are doors and refuse to open them. They can tell you all of the hazards, the disappointments and the risks.

To be doorless in such a room is to be a victim of the heresy of despair. The doorless are hopeless.

To pretend that there are doors that open to easy ways by which these problems can be solved is to live in a fantasy-land.

To refuse to open the doors that are there is to be a defeatist and a cynic.

Men who collect such information, tell us that doors have many meanings. There is the old tradition in certain rural areas of painting the door blue when there were marriageable daughters at home. There are the churches with red doors. There were the doors to the castles with their great hinges of metal and their formidable look of authority. There are the glass doors that sometimes pose threats because they are confused with windows. The important fact to know is that there are doors. Personally, the most important significance of the door is "the open door."

There is a sentence at the opening of a newly published book of essays by the late Pierre Teilhard de Chardin. That distinguished scholar and priest wrote, "The whole future of the earth, as of religion, seems to me to depend on the awakening of our faith in the future." That's an open door.

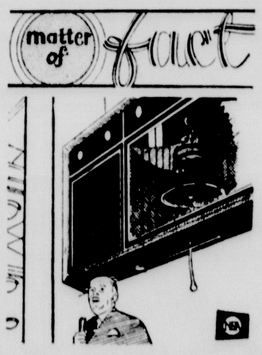
Think of the differences in persons and communities when there are those who understand the meaning of the Lord who says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. To any man who opens, I will come in and sup with him." At the opening of the year, open the door!



The famous Lloyd's of London sells all types of insurance except long-term life and financial guarantee. It started in 1688 as a coffee house, where Edward Lloyd began to sell insurance policies against sea losses. At one time it carried an insurance of more than 600,000 pounds on a bullion shipment from Veracruz, Mexico.

Heating Expanded Areas Easy With Hydronic System

Family expansion often calls for home expansion. Frequently space can be provided with an addition on the house, finishing the attic, remodeling the basement or enclosing a sun porch or breezeway.

With a hydronic (hot water) heating system, there is no problem in providing this important element of expansion. Transmitting hot water through small diameter pipe or tubing, hydronic heating is so flexible that additional heat distributors can be installed wherever needed.

Most boilers have additional capacity to provide heat for extra rooms. If necessary, even more heat output can be obtained by insulating the piping, reports the Plumbing - Heating - Cooling Information Bureau.

With the system of circulated hot water, small pipe or tubing can be "threaded" through walls and floors to connect with baseboard heat distributors. Or, if the area is to have a slab floor, pipe coils can be imbedded to provide the comfort of radiant heat.

One of the first steps in planning home expansion is to get the advice of an experienced heating contractor. He will be glad to offer his suggestions and estimate costs for you.

Other letters to Malone Theatre manager McCutchen on the movie "Peter Pan" include: I wish to express my thanks to you for inviting us to the picture Peter Pan. It was very interesting and exciting to me. I am sure some of us could not have gone if it had not been for your generosity. I am sure everyone enjoyed it. Lillian Reiss.

In behalf of the boys and girls of the sixth grade, No. 2, I want to thank you for the theater party you gave us for Peter Pan. We thought the story beautiful and the acting splendid and all of us enjoyed it very much. We thought the comedy too was very funny and liked it. We wish you much prosperity in all your endeavors. ## PRAYER

Thursday, January 21, 1965

"Go, therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." (Matthew 28:19, RSV)

PRAYER: Heavenly Father, help me to take seriously today the marching orders of our Lord. "Where hate rules, let me bring love; where malice, forgiveness; where dispute, reconciliation; where error, truth; where doubt, belief; where despair, hope; where darkness, Thy light; where sorrow, joy." In the Master's name. Amen.

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Wives of Democratic newcomers to Congress are being counseled on how to get along in Washington. The advice — from the Democratic National Committee's women's division — ranges from protocol to how to get a baby sitter.

Most of the wives said they considered getting baby sitters their most pressing problem. They were given a listing of university and commercial agencies where they can get help.

After the first of two briefing sessions for the wives of new senators and House members was held Friday, Mrs. Charles Farnsley, from Kentucky, laughingly reported the best advice she got was "I don't have to go to everything."

Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey, a veteran of the Capitol scene, came around to offer reassurance as a lunchtime speaker. But, the wife of the vice president-elect had to admit she shares the freshman wives' "unsureness" as she looks to the new job ahead of her.

It has "a different perspective, a different focus—things we've grown accustomed to and feel sure of are different. The whole scope is larger," she said.

Humphrey was a senator for 16 years.

Mrs. Humphrey said she hopes in six months "to feel as comfortable in the new job as you will.

She told the wives to begin right now to campaign for 1966. Campaigning in off-years is a must, she advised.

Mrs. Humphrey urged the wives to take part in Washington's social whirl "not only for yourself, but for your husband."

"Talk at Washington dinner parties and receptions is very educational," she added.

On clothes, Mrs. Margaret Price, national committee vice chairman, said: "Don't think you need a huge new wardrobe to meet Washington requirements.

"Many of the incumbent congressional wives tell us it is much easier to repeat dresses in Washington because from one gathering to another, one seldom sees the same group of people."

Check to See if Air Cadets Rode "Ponies" In Classroom

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) -- Air Force Academy officials said today a faculty committee is investigating reports of classroom cheating by some cadets at this newest of the nation's service academies.

A statement by the institution's information office said academy officials "have started a formal investigation on possible cheating activities by a group of cadets. The investigation is to determine whether or not examination materials from certain classes have been illegally obtained and used."

Maj. Gen. Robert H. Warren, academy superintendent, appointed the investigating committee but the names of its members were withheld. A spokesman said the committee's findings would be made public but that it would take "at least several days."

Academy officials turned aside all queries with a statement that "in order not to compromise the investigation, the academy will not release details until the investigation is complete."

The statement said, "The academy operates under a cadet honor code. The alleged violations being investigated were brought to light during the operations of this honor system."

The investigation is the first at the academy since its inaugural class of cadets enrolled at temporary headquarters in Denver in July 1955. The cadets occupied their permanent home in the Rocky Mountain foothills 10 miles northwest of Colorado Springs in 1958.

A man went to his doctor and complained of a pain in his ankle. After a careful examination, the doctor inquired, "How long have you been walking around like this?"

"Two weeks."

"Say, man, your ankle is broken! Why didn't you come to me sooner?"

"Well, doctor, every time I say something is wrong with me, my wife declares, 'Now, you'll have to stop smoking.'"

Check to See if Air Cadets Rode "Ponies" In Classroom

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) -- Air Force Academy officials said today a faculty committee is investigating reports of classroom cheating by some cadets at this newest of the nation's service academies.

A statement by the institution's information office said academy officials "have started a formal investigation on possible cheating activities by a group of cadets. The investigation is to determine whether or not examination materials from certain classes have been illegally obtained and used."

Maj. Gen. Robert H. Warren, academy superintendent, appointed the investigating committee but the names of its members were withheld. A spokesman said the committee's findings would be made public but that it would take "at least several days."

Academy officials turned aside all queries with a statement that "in order not to compromise the investigation, the academy will not release details until the investigation is complete."

The statement said, "The academy operates under a cadet honor code. The alleged violations being investigated were brought to light during the operations of this honor system."
